Dear Conference Delegate,

Excitement has been building since we decided to return to Glasgow for our 51st conference marking our 50th anniversary year as an association. Glasgow, which means ‘dear green place’, is the cultural capital of Scotland and one of the most beautiful Victorian cities in the UK. Add to that the views of the impressive River Clyde, the wealth of museums, galleries, cultural events, restaurants, cafés, a state-of-the-art events campus and we have a venue which should satisfy everyone’s wishes and provide all with lasting memories.

We are delighted to have a wide range of international plenary speakers. On Tuesday, Gabriel Diaz Maggioli will kick off the week giving us his insights on how to empower teachers through professional development, followed on Wednesday by Sarah Mercer who will discuss the psychologies of both language learners and teachers. On Thursday, JJ Wilson will enlighten us on ways to incorporate social justice and critical thinking into our ELT classrooms, and on Friday Jane Setter will share her thoughts on teaching and learning intonation in a multimedia presentation. The conference will close on Friday afternoon with the renowned poet, artist and documentary maker, Imtiaz Dharker who will read from some of her latest works.

With the very large number of proposals received, delegates will have a wide range of sessions to choose from. Delegates also enjoy visiting the IATEFL Jobs Fair and the Exhibition to discover what is new and have a look at the latest ELT books, materials and resources. In the evening, there are lots of opportunities to relax, get to know other delegates, and enjoy yourselves. You can find out more on page 12.

I would like to personally thank our Head Office Staff and the volunteers who have put in so many hours to organise the events at this conference, none of this would be possible without them. I would like to thank all our sponsors for their generous contributions, you can find out more about each of them in the Sponsorship section of this Programme. We are also very grateful to the British Council whose partnership enables us to live stream the conference to thousands of ELT professionals for the eleventh time through IATEFL Online. Thank you, finally, to all the delegates as this conference could not take place without you!

Whether you are attending this conference for the first time or have been to more than you can count, we hope you enjoy this event which kicks off our 50th anniversary year. It would be rare to leave with less than we arrive with and even if your suitcase is quite full, we are sure that you will find room for mementos, resources, memories, friendships and experiences to take back home with you. We will be sending you a feedback survey when the conference is over and ask you to please fill it out so that we can find out what you thought of the conference. Your opinions go a long way in helping us plan our future conferences!

With best wishes,

Marjorie Rosenbeg
IATEFL President

IATEFL is proud of its International Ambassadors

Our current International Ambassadors are Lindsay Clandfield, Claudia Ferradas and many of our former IATEFL presidents: Susan Barduhn, Madeleine Du Vivier, Peter Grundy, Chris Kennedy, Alan Maley, Herbert Puchta, Adrian Underhill, Ron White, Marion Williams and Tessa Woodward.

IATEFL ASSOCIATES’ DAY
in association with The British Council

IATEFL has over 130 Associate members. An Associate is another Teaching Association (TA) that has entered into a mutually beneficial relationship with IATEFL. A benefit of becoming an Associate lies in linking up to a network of international TAs, and through this, a network of language educators from all over the world, and from a range of diverse backgrounds and nationalities.

The Associates’ Day on 3rd April was a chance for representatives of these TAs to get together and discuss matters of common interest. One of the overarching aims of most TAs is to build professional communities.

We thank our sponsor of Associates’ Day, The British Council.

51ST ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL IATEFL CONFERENCE AND EXHIBITION
THE SCOTTISH EVENT CAMPUS (SEC), GLASGOW, UK

Welcome to this year’s conference and exhibition in Glasgow. The annual conference brings together ELT professionals from around the world to discuss, reflect on and develop their ideas. It offers many opportunities for professional contact and development, and is a fantastic networking event. You can enjoy five plenary sessions and over 600 presentations consisting of talks, workshops, poster presentations, forums and more.

THE CITY OF GLASGOW
Glasgow is a port city on the River Clyde in Scotland. It’s famed for its Victorian and art nouveau architecture, a rich legacy of the city’s 18th-20th Century prosperity due to trade and shipbuilding. Glasgow offers a blend of museums and galleries, and a diverse array of restaurants and bars. Visit www.peoplemakeglasgow.com to find out more.

PLENARY SPEAKERS

Gabriel Diaz Maggioli
Sarah Mercer
JJ Wilson
Jane Setter
Imtiaz Dharker

Please refer to the Presentations section for details and timings of these five engaging sessions.

ELT RESOURCES EXHIBITION
The ELT resources exhibition will take place in Hall 5 at the SEC and is free for all. It will host an international showcase of the latest resources, services and publications from course providers, publishers, digital innovators, game companies and many more. With ample seating, a selection of hot and cold food to purchase, and free tea and coffee available all day, the exhibition is not to be missed.

DELEGATE BADGES
Your delegate badge entitles you to access all sessions and evening events on the day[s] you are registered for. Access to sessions is strictly by eligible badge only and is on a first come first served basis. Please note the room capacity for each session as shown in the Presentations section. If you wish to attend extra days, you must visit the Registration Desk to register and pay.

Please take care of your delegate badge, it will cost you £10 to have it reprinted.
CERTIFICATES OF ATTENDANCE
in association with Mailability
Certificates of attendance are available for you to print on demand. Visit the scanning station at the registration desk, scan your badge barcode and a copy of your certificate will be printed automatically. The scanning station will be available any time the registration desk is open up until 12 noon on Friday 7th April. We advise that you do not wait until the last day to print your certificate as the queue will be longer. Please note that we will not send certificates after the event.

INFORMATION & TECHNICAL HELP DESK
In addition to helping with any general information about the conference, our stewards will be available to help you make sure you can use your laptop or mobile devices to get the most out of the conference. If you are worried about using the conference technology for your presentation, or are having problems with the WiFi or Conference App, the desk will be open during the registration opening times and our stewards will be happy to help. Please note that IATEFL cannot be held responsible for any loss or damage to your equipment or data as a result of the help and advice given to you by our staff and volunteers.

RESERVATION HIGHWAY
Our partners, Reservation Highway, will be in attendance at the conference on Monday and Tuesday to help you with your accommodation questions. They will be located near the registration desk.

PHOTOGRAPHY
The conference photographers and videographers will be taking photographs and footage for use in the post-conference supplement for Voices, on the cover of Conference Selections, our website, IATEFL social media and other advertising materials. If you do not wish to be included in the photographs or footage, please inform the photographers and videographers when you see them. Delegates are welcome to take their own photographs throughout the conference, but should be aware that no session can be filmed without prior permission from IATEFL.

YOUR FEEDBACK
Your feedback on this conference is a great help to us as we plan future conferences and events. We would be grateful if you could take the time to complete a short survey to let us know what to keep and what to change. We will email all delegates a link to the online survey at the end of the conference. All completed feedback entries received by 21st April 2017 will be entered into a draw for a free registration for our 2018 conference in Brighton!

BRIGHTON 2018
Don’t forget to put our next conference in your diary! It will be held in sunny Brighton, UK between Tuesday 10th and Friday 13th April 2018, with Pre-Conference Events taking place on Monday 9th April 2018. More details will be available on our conference website (conference.iatefl.org) soon.

PLANNING YOUR CONFERENCE

IMPORTANT PROGRAMME NOTE
This Conference Programme contains full information on the academic sessions. This information replaces the provisional Preview of Presentations listed in the Preview Brochure that was available online earlier this year. The information contained in the Preview Brochure is no longer current. Changes made to the programme after the printing of this Conference Programme, including cancellations, will be displayed on notice boards located around the venue.
SESSION TIMINGS
To enable the smooth running of over 600 presentations, speakers and delegates must vacate rooms immediately at the end of each session. We require time between sessions to change the set-up in rooms, delegates must be allowed to reach their next session on time, and the next speaker in the room needs time to set up. Thank you for your cooperation.

THE IATEFL CONFERENCE APP
This free app allows you to browse and search the Conference Programme; select individual sessions and add them to your conference planner; share your thoughts via a variety of social media connections; network through business card swapping; access interactive floorplans; receive push notifications and much more. The app is available for iOS and Android smartphones and tablets.

BRITISH COUNCIL & IATEFL ONLINE
iatefl.britishcouncil.org
Working together with the British Council, we are proud to be able to make the conference accessible to a large global community of teachers and educators, both members and non-members, through IATEFL Online. Online participants will be able to watch live video sessions and recorded highlights of the conference on the IATEFL Online website and access a wide range of multimedia resources including video and PowerPoint presentations of selected sessions and of course details on our exhibitors. IATEFL Online will feature video interviews with conference presenters and onsite delegates who will share their thoughts and experiences with the online community.

HOW CAN YOU GET INVOLVED?
#IATEFL2017
Access the IATEFL Online website via the Internet Cafe or the SEC WiFi and consider playing an active part in the day-to-day proceedings by sharing photos, tweets or your reflections, if you have a blog of your own. Last year over 60,000 teachers watched our online conference coverage and this year we hope that even more participants will get involved via the IATEFL Online website and social media channels. We hope you join in to share your ideas on the conference with teachers from all over the world and be a part of one of the biggest online events for teachers of English. Join in and follow all the action as it happens.

Please note that no other filming of sessions is allowed without prior permission from IATEFL.

IN THE EXHIBITION
As well as a wide range of exhibitor stands for you to visit, Hall 5 is a central hub of activity for everyone to enjoy whilst the exhibition is open. It’s the perfect place to spend the breaks between sessions.

CATERING
We are serving complimentary tea and coffee throughout the conference and there will also be a range of hot and cold food for you to purchase during exhibition opening times.

CHARGING BOOTHs
in association with Pearson ELT
Brought to you by Pearson ELT, the exhibition hall has two charging points. These booths are free to use for all delegates and there is seating available. These booths are perfect to use to recharge your devices, as well as yourself, between sessions.
INTERNET CAFE
in association with Pearson ELT
Brought to you by Pearson ELT, there is an Internet Cafe situated in the exhibition area. Feel free to check your emails, browse the web, and don’t forget to take part in IATEFL Online while you are there.

MEETING POINT
New to IATEFL, the exhibition is hosting a meeting point. This area has been designed as a place for you to meet friends, have a sit down, a drink and a catch up, or to organise a meeting of your own.

MEET THE PATRON
The IATEFL Patron, David Crystal, will be at the IATEFL exhibition stand on Tuesday and Thursday during the lunch breaks. If you would like to say hello, or have a question for David, please join us there for this great opportunity.

IATEFL JOBS FAIR
The IATEFL Jobs Fair has become a valuable forum for connecting employers with talented teachers and ELT professionals around the world. It is an integral part of the exhibition. Delegates can browse the vacancies on our Jobs Boards, speak informally with employers about a career or location move, and apply for jobs on site. Many recruiters will hold screening sessions and formal interviews during the Jobs Fair for qualified candidates. The Jobs Fair also hosts a professional CV Clinic where you can have your CV appraised by the Write Stuff consultants. They offer expert advice and tips to showcase your skills and experience effectively.

OTHER FACILITIES AROUND THE VENUES

CLOAKROOM FACILITIES
There are complimentary cloakroom facilities available in the Argyll foyer of the Crowne Plaza Hotel. Please note that whilst staff may not be present at this cloakroom throughout the day, your belongings will be secure and staff nearby will be happy to help. Additionally, there are cloakroom facilities located on the main concourse of the SEC. Delegates can leave belongings here for the a fee of £2 per item.

PHOTOCOPYING AND PRINTING
Photocopying and printing facilities are provided by the SEC’s Information & Business Centre, located on the main concourse. We regret that no responsibility can be taken by IATEFL or the SEC in the event of machine failure.

PRAYER ROOM
There is a room specially available for delegates of all faiths who want to take time out of the conference for prayer and quiet contemplation. You will find it on the main concourse near the entrance to Hall 5.

IATEFL PROJECTS

WHAT DO WE DO?
Now in its third year, IATEFL Projects offers our Associates the opportunity to bid for small grants that make a big difference to language learning in their local context. The projects they undertake with the grants would not be possible without IATEFL support and we believe this charitable initiative is in line with IATEFL’s mission to link, develop and support English language teaching professionals worldwide.
IATEFL Projects is excited to be supporting CI-ATEFL this year as they undertake plans to develop a digital learning community, supporting teachers of English within Cote d’Ivoire. For more information about current, past and future Projects, please visit www.iatefl.org, or visit the Projects stand in the exhibition, you’ll find it next to the Pop-up stage.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

The Scotsman Teddy
Our IATEFL Scotsman is the mascot for this year’s conference. With his kilt, sporran and IATEFL pride, he is the perfect keep sake for our 51st conference. The IATEFL Scotsman is a limited edition, and is available to purchase at the registration desk for £5.

Raffle
The IATEFL Raffle is back again for its second year, with the main prize being generously donated by Pilgrims - a Pilgrims two-week Creative Methodology for the Classroom course and self-catering accommodation at the University of Kent. Tickets cost £5 and can be found at the registration desk.

Lucky Dip
With donations from the lovely IATEFL Exhibitors, we are bringing back the popular Lucky Dip for Glasgow 2017. You will find the Lucky Dip in the exhibition hall, it costs just £1 for the chance to win fantastic goodies from the exhibitors!

THANK YOU
We would like to say a huge thank you to all our members, volunteers and supporters who raise money for IATEFL Projects throughout the year. If you would like to make your own donation at any time, please visit members.iatefl.org/donate.
ADDITIONAL SESSIONS

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING
The IATEFL Annual General Meeting (AGM) will be held in the Clyde Auditorium on Wednesday 5th April from 1310 to 1410. All IATEFL members are invited to attend. The AGM Agenda and reports will be available at the AGM and in the members’ area of the IATEFL website.

INTERACTIVE LANGUAGE FAIRS
This year the two Interactive Language Fairs take place on Tuesday and Thursday in Forth. After a brief introduction by the facilitators, delegates will then be free to explore their interests with the presenters at their tables. A feast of presentations in a single interactive format.

TRIBUTE SESSION
The tribute session is an opportunity to remember colleagues who have died since the last conference. If you’ve lost a colleague or former colleague, you’ll have an opportunity to say a few words in their memory and, if you wish, to bring along a memento (book, teaching materials, etc.). Or you may just want to come to the session to hear about colleagues who are no longer with us, and perhaps to add any memories you may have. The tribute session will take place on Wednesday 1720-1825 in Staffa.

“HOW TO ...” TRACK
These sessions aim to inform and support delegates across a range of areas they may be unfamiliar with. These sessions will take place from 0815 to 0845, giving you time to get to the Plenary Sessions at 0900. Please see the Presentations section, or the conference app, for more details.

HORNBY SCHOLARS & ALUMNI SLOTS
The name of A.S. Hornby is highly regarded in the ELT world, not only through his publications and ideas on teaching methods but also through the work of the A.S. Hornby Educational Trust, set up in 1961. This was a far-sighted and generous initiative whereby a large proportion of Hornby’s income was set aside to improve the teaching and learning of English as a foreign language, chiefly by providing grants to enable English teachers from overseas to come to Britain for professional training. This year’s Hornby scholars will present ‘Factors influencing English language teacher motivation’ on Tuesday. Two Hornby Alumni will also be presenting. They are: Re Le Thi Quynh Tran (Vietnam) presenting ‘Enhancing capacities for ELT teacher trainers’ on Thursday, and Svetlana Khan (Uzbekistan) presenting ‘ELT in Uzbekistan: English for teaching or teaching for English?’ on Friday.
SIGNATURE EVENTS

The signature events are hosted by our Platinum and Gold Sponsors. They are designed to showcase expertise and throw light on state-of-the-art thinking in a key area which is relevant to the particular institution or publisher. The signature events provide an opportunity for delegates to find out about upcoming trends, learn about new areas of research, and engage with well-known, international experts in exciting and often controversial topics. The signature events vary in format and include talks, panel discussions and debates.

British Council - Tuesday, see page 92
Language for Resilience
The British Council has the pleasure of inviting you to attend the follow up to our report launch of ‘Language for Resilience’. The report examines the role that language can play in enhancing the resilience of Syrian refugees and host-communities. The ‘Language for Resilience’ report was commissioned in response to the unprecedented effects of the Syrian refugee crisis and brings together information gathered through interviews with refugees, host communities and those working to support them, with lessons learned from past and on-going British Council language programming in conflict and post-conflict areas. Key practitioners and Syrian refugee stakeholders will share their thoughts on the role of language in enhancing the resilience of individuals and communities affected by crisis.

New Oriental - Wednesday, see page 138
Global Standards - Local Needs
Global professional development programs aim to deliver a modern, communicative and effective skill set for teaching, regardless of where the teacher is or what the teacher does. In this session, using examples from the world’s largest education market (China), we will discover how the reality of the classroom experience is simply not reflected in international training courses, and more importantly, what exactly we can do about it.

telc - language tests - Thursday, see page 188
Who watches the Watchmen? Assessing the Assessors
telc – language tests has gathered an academic panel to explore the world of assessment from the inside. We will consider various ethoses used by the different exam boards and how these are then drawn together by national and international accreditation bodies and agreements. We will examine the value of exams and to exactly whom they are valuable. We will also consider the different modes an exam board uses for gaining credibility. We will look at internal and external factors which precipitate participation. Also, we will have to examine cultural bias and how to proactively prevent this in test development. We will look into these issues and discuss and ask the following:
• Modes of assessment
• What is being assessed?
• Who does the assessment?
• Who decides they can?
• Life of an examiner
• Practical skills or linguistic hoops?
• Teaching a language or teaching a test?
This is designed to be interactive – the session will include a Question and Answer period.
EVENING EVENTS

It’s important to take time out to relax during the conference so we’ve arranged a number of evening events for you to enjoy. Remember to take your delegate badge with you, without it you won’t be able to attend the activities. For more information on all these events, please see the Presentations section.

OTHER THINGS TO SEE AND DO

There is plenty to see and do in the city of Glasgow when you want to take a breather from the busyness of the conference. For some inspiration, visit www.peoplemakeglasgow.com.

Those of you who have booked a place on the Glasgow Music City Tour on Wednesday or Thursday evening should remember to be at the SEC Box Office at 5.45pm to meet your guide. If you have not booked for the tour, it’s not too late. Please visit the Help or Registration Desk for more information about how to purchase your ticket.
IATEFL SCHOLARSHIPS

Each year IATEFL offers a great range of conference scholarships to enable teachers, trainers and other ELT professionals the opportunity to attend the IATEFL Annual Conference in the UK.

IATEFL has a Scholarship Working Party (SWP) whose job it is to raise scholarship funds, create new scholarships, publicise the existence of the current scholarships worldwide, and organise the selection of scholarship winners. The SWP also works to improve the conference experience for scholarship winners.

There will be a Scholars stand in the exhibition and someone from the SWP will be there during morning coffee and lunch to answer any questions you may have about scholarships. So whether you are a current or past scholar, or a potential applicant or sponsor, do come along for a chat.

BRIGHTON 2018 SCHOLARSHIPS

We already have a number of scholarships confirmed for our Brighton 2018 conference. If you would like more information about what will be available and how you can apply, visit the IATEFL Scholars stand in the exhibition and pick up a leaflet.
In 2016 IATEFL celebrated a landmark, our 50th conference!

It was a huge success with an amazing turnout. We loved sharing this celebration with you and making these moments special.

That is not to say that we do not focus on making every conference special, hours are spent brainstorming for new ways enhance our delegate experience, and while we can make plans, it is the sponsors the execute these plans.

Sponsors play a vital role in the delegate experience. The IATEFL annual conference has grown so much over the years that we rely on the sponsors to ensure that we can fulfil the needs and wishes of the delegates. Sponsors not only support IATEFL, they support the delegate experience and make sure that you, the delegates have a memorial conference.

We would like to say thank you to the sponsors for IATEFL Glasgow 2017, who have been with us every step of the way, not only financially, but also in time and energy, each sponsor has given something to the conference so when you see them, please make sure they get a great thank you from you!

Unpick the Myths in English Language Teaching in China

Jim Scrivener and Mat Clark will explore and uncover some of the mysteries of language education in the world’s largest ELT market, China. They’ll try to unravel questions like:

“Why in so many classrooms are children treated like adults, while adults are treated like children?”

“Why is a book written by a British man in 1967 still today the biggest selling ELT book in China, selling millions upon millions of copies year in year out?”

Presented by Jim Scrivener and Mat Clark

telc Online Testing - Test or tool?

A whistlestop tour of the new telc Online Placement Test. What can you do with it? What is it for? What will it be no good for? There will be ideas on the nature of both online testing in general and the inner workings of the world of the placement test. This will be a fast-paced look at a growing phenomena, arguably here to stay and bound to increase. How should we, as an industry, use these tests? Are they a realistic barometer or simply a tool to glean some modicum of information, but not an exhaustive assessment? What currency should they have? How far should they go?

Presented by Thom Jones

16:00 - 16:15  Trinity College London

Your majesty shall mock at me: I cannot speak your England

So says the princess of France on meeting her prospective husband Henry V in Shakespeare’s play. In no other work does Shakespeare so thoroughly analyse his use of English and the ways in which it interacts with another language. The play also contains the first ESOL lesson in English dramatic writing! - Which will be performed live by students from the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland. Many of the concepts introduced at this session will be developed more fully in John Gardyne’s presentation the following day.

IATEFL SPECIAL INTEREST GROUPS (SIGs)

This section contains information on IATEFL's Special Interest Group

What is a SIG Day?
From the speaker proposals submitted for the conference, each SIG chooses presentations related to their SIG area. These presentations make a 'SIG Day' within the conference programme. If you are interested in a particular SIG area, you have the opportunity to follow this track of selected sessions throughout the day. One session in each SIG Day will be the SIG's Open Forum. At a SIG Open Forum, delegates can find out more about the SIG, its events and its committee.

What are SIGs?
The aim of the IATEFL Special Interest Groups (SIGs) is to extend the work of IATEFL into professional specialist areas. This enables members to benefit from information regarding new professional developments and local and international events.

Why should I join a SIG?
Each SIG aims to provide its members with three mailings per year (at least two of which are newsletters or equivalent publications). The SIG newsletters often include articles from members, as well as informing the membership of the proceedings of conferences and one-day events which members may have been unable to attend. Each SIG also aims to organise a minimum of two face-to-face events per year (ideally at least one outside the UK). In addition, online events may be held. Other benefits vary from one SIG to another. For example, websites, discussion lists, use of social media, scholarships and archives of online events and publications.

How can I join a SIG?
Full Individual Membership of IATEFL includes one SIG. If you would like to add a SIG, or if your membership does not entitle you to join a SIG, please email membership@iatefl.org for a form. Additional SIGs cost £20 for individuals and £33 for institutions.

Who are the SIGs and how can I contact them?

Plenary session by Gabriel Diaz Maggioli

Gabriel Diaz Maggioli is a teacher who applies the lessons learned in the classroom to his roles as writer, researcher, administrator and teacher educator. He got his BA in TESOL in Uruguay and completed Master’s and Doctoral work at the University of Bath in the UK. He has acted as consultant for international organizations such as UNICEF, UNESCO, the European Union, the Inter-American Development Bank, the US Department of State and the World Bank. A frequent presenter at local and international conferences, Gabriel has shared his theory-in-practice with colleagues in the Americas, Europe, the Middle East and East Asia. He currently lives in Uruguay where he is tenured professor of TESOL Methods at the National Teacher Education College.

Empowering teachers through continued professional development: frameworks, practices and promises

The notion that language teachers need ongoing professional development opportunities should be considered a harmless platitude. Yet, as the field stands now, most of our colleagues are not provided with such opportunities as parts of their jobs. How is it then that we hear so many wonderful tales of exploration and discovery? Teachers have taken upon themselves to build these growth opportunities. In this plenary I will share some stories, and weave the plots of new stories to come by presenting a “state of the art” hawk eye view of professional development and recommending potential ways in which colleagues can help colleagues learn and develop.

Getting pronunciation out of the head and into the body
Adrian Underhill (Freelance)
The muscle coordinations required for the sounds of our first language/s soon become habituated, making it harder to install the new muscle coordinations of subsequent languages. I will offer a physical, proprioceptive toolkit that helps learners get behind these habits and reconnect with the muscles that make the difference. Participants will critique and reformulate these activities for their own teaching.

The imagined classroom - redesigning for the workplace
Roy Bicknell (Interlíngua, The Netherlands)
The workplace now requires a greater flexibility of response. We can address this shift in learning needs in an ‘imagined classroom’. This two-part workshop will explore how speaking and writing activities can provide more ‘affordance’ in student learning; the second part will focus on how key areas of classroom dynamics - feedback and lesson design - underpin the ‘redesigning’ of the classroom.

Vocabulary learning with a personal touch
Viktórya Zeljanko (Streamline Language School)
This workshop is a great opportunity to reflect on (target) vocabulary teaching in communicative courses, with a new twist of including student-driven items into practice. Participants will leave the workshop having tried out activities for analysis and practice applicable to any context, and a clear idea of how to arrange vocabulary work that will meet with individual needs of students.

ELT materials writing: emerging principles
Katherine Billsborough (Freelance)
In this workshop, we’ll look at how changing trends in ELT teaching and learning are affecting the focus of ELT materials writers’ principles. We’ll discuss the importance of developing our own made-to-measure principles within a practical framework. We’ll finish by considering some principles for those writers creating materials in unique contexts, using real examples from ELT writers as a springboard.

Academic reading - effective skills development for lower levels
Deborah Hobbs (EC Bristol)
How effective are we at developing academic reading skills for lower-level Arabic speakers taking the IELTS exam? These learners, hampered by culturally and linguistically driven challenges, typically apply bottom-up techniques, and often show limited contextual understanding. In this participative workshop, we will work through a number of lesson ideas which, whilst focusing on Arabic speakers, can be easily adapted.

International students: can EAP bridge the academic and cultural gap?

Theresa Clementson & Gary Hicks (University of Brighton)

What do students really need from intensive EAP courses? The answer is less about language and more about developing academic and cultural skills, which are completely new for many students. Based on ongoing research with current students, two highly-experienced EAP teachers offer useful insights and practical guidelines on how to develop effective courses for pre-sessional students applying to English-speaking universities.

Forum on Listening

Adventures in Listening: the bathtub experiment

Marje Willoughby (International House London)

Developing and setting up extensive reading projects with learners across a series of lessons using the same text is common practice, but how would this work with listening? This talk explores ideas on how to implement extensive yet also intensive listening projects, looking at different texts, tasks and techniques to develop learners’ listening skills in the classroom and outside.

Listening effectively: teaching and learning through task-based activities

Kirti Kapur (NCERT, New Delhi)

Listening is essential for effective communication to enhance comprehension, promote dialogue and develop empathy. For second language students in India there are few meaningful listening contexts in English. Task-based activities provide a crucial fillip. Examples of task-based activities from teacher training conducted across India, their outcomes and future actions will be shared in my presentation.

Listening using smart devices: effects on student interaction and autonomy

Clive Shaw (Brunel University Language Centre)

This talk will focus on the use of smart devices to deliver listening tasks in the form of podcasts. Findings are based on classroom research carried out at Brunel University Language Centre. I will explore the effects such devices have on classroom interaction and how students’ control over listening provides more opportunities for monitoring and learner autonomy.

Forum on Digital materials

Interactivity: just making learning content digital isn’t enough
Paul Sweeney (Digital ELT)
Digital learning materials are often less creative or flexible than they could be. They commonly suffer from self-imposed limitations in the ways in which we conceptualise digital material, or are not informed by a new generation of content creation tools and course types (such as MOOCs) which should lead us to rethink what we mean by ‘interactivity’.

Using Learner Experience Design (LXD) to improve language learning products
Laurie Harrison & Nick Robinson (ELTjam)
User experience (UX) describes the total experience of interacting with a product - its usability and how it makes the user feel. Good UX is now considered essential for any digital product. We’ll examine how the concept of Learner Experience (LX) applies the same thinking to the process of learning. And if there’s a recipe for good LX, what are the ingredients?

Materials develop courses: what teachers want and what they need
Paul Slater (University of Brighton)
While the coursebook remains central to most English language teaching classes, a growing number of teachers are now exploiting a diverse range of digital materials to support their lessons. I will discuss what this increasing use of digital materials mean for language teacher education courses, particularly the materials element of such courses.
Forum on Blended learning

Blended learning models: redefining teacher development, evaluating our know-how

Maria Norton (British Council Italy)

What blended learning models best serve the exploitation of emerging technologies to engage teachers in their development? Educators undertaking blended teacher development in Italy did bust some myths - such as online learning is a second rate option - eventually! I’ll discuss this and the formula produced that provides food for thought for ministries and providers alike, suggesting blended learning can be more culturally meaningful.

Towards Implementing the flipped classroom in an EFL context

Ahmed Ali Saleh Al Ajmi (Rustaq CAS, Oman)

This presentation investigates students’ and teachers’ views about introducing the flipped classroom to an EFL context. Theory about the flipped classroom, its characteristics and practitioners’ views about it will be discussed. Then the study and its main findings will be considered. The audience will be provided with practical hints on how to apply the study findings in their EFL contexts.

Blended English learning – which blend works best?

Julia Stanton (British Council)

Blended English courses in many different forms are becoming increasingly popular but which blend works best for the learners? This theoretical and practical presentation for experienced audiences looks at the results from a blended learning research study in Mozambique and suggests ways to approach the setting up of a blended course.

IATEFL TEASIG SCHOLARSHIP WINNER

Can assessment be formative and summative? Yes, if it’s authentic

Ilya Denisenko (Moscow State Linguistic University)

Teachers all over the world are trying to teach their students English, raising learner autonomy and motivation. However, many still can’t avoid teaching to the test and focusing on discrete aspects of language because of the demands of the national exam. This presentation will suggest practical ideas on designing summative tests for formative purposes, through the lens of ‘authentic assessment’.

Teacher development through teacher activity groups, technology and social media

Teachers’ networks and continuing professional development
Sudeb Kumar Biswas (English in Action, Bangladesh)
Any teachers’ professional development initiative requires follow-on support to ensure that they continue with new practices. This presentation focuses on how teachers are currently utilizing these platforms for their continuing professional development within a wider community.

How has Moodle been used as an effective tool to develop Iranian teacher trainers professionally and create a network of trainers throughout the country? What changes has it brought about in Iranian ELT? In this presentation, we will share our experiences of ‘Moodling’ and speak about how this platform has helped teacher trainers benefit from CPD topics presented on it.
Projects: a tool to develop teenagers’ awareness of cultural diversity
Leticia Moraes (Cultura Inglesa Sao Paulo)
Known for fostering creativity and collaboration in a meaningful way, projects are a powerful tool not only to engage students in the learning process, but also to trigger reflection on issues such as cultural diversity and tolerance. This talk will show examples of how projects can go beyond language development and contribute to teenagers’ growth as world citizens.

Drama with a small d

Drama is far too useful as a tool for learning to be reserved for the high-achievers and the extroverts. We’ll begin by examining some of the benefits of rehearsing and performing a simple play with learners in challenging contexts around the world, and conclude with a live video-linked performance from a group of children in an UNRWA school in Gaza.

Data 101 - Making sense of analytics in digital English products
Nell Ballantyne (British Council)
When developing digital products for English learners, getting analytical data on that product is easy with a proliferation of analytics tools such as Google Analytics. This talk will share how you can make sense of the data and ensure it is answering questions that can be used to make better products for learners.

Knowledge about integration of digital technologies and constructing teacher identities

Managing a language centre: communication, quality and staff development
Alena Hradilova (Masaryk University Language Centre)
The talk shows how changes in our Language Centre organizational structure and the introduction of new networks enhance the quality of cooperation, sharing, staff training, research and communication at various levels of the LC. LC staff members’ feedback is used to illustrate how these novelties help teachers in personal and professional development and offers an interesting and original LC staff typology.
Is there a leader in you?
Bita Rezaei (Hermes Institute)
Stepping into the arena and leading a team to achieve success calls for a certain set of attitudes and attributes. What we need on our way to a great business and a happy team is a competent leader. This talk will lead participants (experienced teachers and managers) on a journey of self-discovery of their leadership qualities.

Forum on EMI
Learning English in EMI courses; a by-product or learning outcome?
Aleskandra Sudhershan (University of Applied Sciences Kufstein Tirol)
The drive towards EMI-sation of HE appears unstoppable but its pedagogical implications are under-researched. This concerns particularly the extent to which improving English is considered an explicit learning outcome in EMI courses. This session will examine the current debate on the issue and relate it to the findings of a study conducted with academic staff at an Austrian HEI.

Exploring effective practices in EMI vocational training
Caterina Skloutou (Laureate Vocational Saudi Arabia)
The findings of action research on effective planning and delivery of Vocational Training programs using English as the medium of instruction (EMI) in Saudi Arabia will be presented in this talk. The main program features and learning outcomes, student audience, research methodology and findings of the research conducted in three male and five female vocational colleges will be outlined.

EMI and ESP: will they ‘marry’ in Ukraine?
Zhanna Sevastianova (British Council Ukraine) & Liudmyla Klymenko (British Council Projects, Ukraine)
The talk gives an overview of the British Council English for Universities project and introduces an academic teacher development programme based on the baseline study findings. You will see how we create opportunities for both subject teachers and English teachers to learn from each other, work collaboratively, and shape the future of tertiary education in Ukraine.

Writing: Is little and often the best approach?
Anna Young (Bell Cambridge)
Getting students to write can sometimes be tricky. In this talk, I’ll share my experiences of experimenting with daily 10-minute writing tasks, success criteria and feedback that goes beyond an error correction code to help students to improve their range and use of written language. I’ll share what I did, how I did it and why students liked it.

Building a successful community of practice among online English teachers

| Joselina Castanos (Laureate International Universities) |
| Building a sense of community among online teachers can be difficult. However, it is essential to maintain standards, provide support, and research best practices for online learning. This session will walk trainers and administrators through practical tools and strategies used successfully to engage teachers to effectively teach English online to faculty, staff and students across a vast network of institutions. |

Online teaching: talent or training?

| Karin Heuert Galvao (I-Study Interactive Learning) |
| Are you apt to teach online? Some might say you just need internet connection, a Skype account, headphones, a webcam, and you’re good to go. But are you? In this talk, we will discuss whether this statement is accurate, if you are ready to teach online, what behaviors you should have and what tools you should master. |

Challenges of developing reading skills and using guided reading strategies

Renu Dhotre (M P Shah English High School)

There is a close relationship between students’ reading skills and academic success. However, many students read without comprehension and often struggle with reading. So tailor-cut guided reading strategies, including before-, during- and post-reading methods, were used to suit individual needs. I’ll explain how these strategies were found to have a great impact on the struggling readers.

FUSE – The Finnish Upper Secondary School Corpus of Spoken English

Lasse Ehrnrooth (Alpila Upper Secondary School)

This poster looks at the linguistic features present in the current version of FUSE, the Finnish Upper Secondary School Corpus of Spoken English. The speech corpus consists of transcribed dialogues recorded during various, official, spoken English examinations in Finnish upper secondary schools. The research focus will be on hesitation markers and overlapping speech.

A three-step conversation practice, lowering affective filter through peer collaboration

Yumi Gomez (Rikkyo University, Japan)

Making hesitant EFL learners speak English can sometimes be a big challenge. This poster reports on an action research that aimed to help Japanese university students gain confidence in speaking English through a series of paired free talk practices in the classroom. The poster will provide practical information for teachers in a similar context.

Intercultural communicative competence – a competitive advantage for global employability

Monika Hrebackova (Czech Technical University, MlAS School of Business and Interdisciplinary Studies)

How do we deal with the changing communication needs of the global job market, minimize misunderstanding, prejudice, identity conflict and language deficiency which compounds the lack of skills to interact successfully in business? This poster describes innovative methodologies and topics which motivate students to go beyond their cultural comfort zone, and make them more competent and effective users of English.

Christina Yerou (Cyprus University of Technology)

Task-based language learning (TBLL) is believed to create an ideal environment where language learning is facilitated and enhanced via meaningful, student-centred, real-life tasks. Such tasks are particularly welcomed in English for Specific Purposes courses, where learners’ specified needs are catered for. This poster exhibits university students’ perspectives towards the implementation of TBLL in an ESP course.

Developing global competency in ELT

Ceri Jones & Ben Goldstein (Freelance)

Global competency focuses on developing particular skills and attitudes: the knowledge and understanding of global issues and intercultural concerns; the fostering of analytical and critical thinking; and the valuing of cultural diversity. This talk shows how these concepts can be incorporated easily in class via practical and engaging ideas that can be used at different ages and levels.

Engaging students: lessons from Elvis, the Gruffalo and more
Mike Riley (Macmillan Education)

What do a daredevil stuntman, a Nobel prize-winning physicist, the King of rock 'n' roll and the Gruffalo all have in common? They all knew a thing or two about engaging people. In this talk, we will uncover the secrets of some of our most captivating icons and see what we can learn about engaging our students.

The genuine article (you couldn’t make it up)
Sue Kay (Pearson ELT)

Authentic classroom texts are, in my experience, more engaging than texts invented to showcase language, and are more likely to elicit genuine responses. I’ll present tips for choosing and adapting authentic texts so they are useful as language input and enable meaningful language practice. I’ll illustrate my talk with examples from Focus.

Pakistan diaries: teacher development through outreach programmes
Nazliha Ali Jafri (Emirates Aviation College)

This session reports on a volunteer teacher development initiative in Pakistan, started by a group of ‘TESOLers’ based in the UAE. I will elaborate on my four-year journey with my colleagues to share insights about the significant difference their efforts have made. I will also highlight some exciting new developments in the context.

Is seeing always believing? An approach to classroom observation
Stephanie Aldred (Manchester Metropolitan University)

Classroom observation plays an important role in TESOL practice, but its reliability has been brought into question by recent large-scale, mainstream studies (e.g., Strong et al 2011). A social constructivist approach to observation is presented for high-stakes situations, illustrated in part by narrative voices of TESOL practitioners, responding to some of the unique dynamics present in the TESOL setting.
Symposium on Teaching learning strategies to English learners

Preparing teachers for language learning strategies instruction
Anna Uhl Chamot (The George Washington University)
This presentation will describe teacher preparation programs from five countries that help English teachers integrate language learning strategies instruction into their classrooms. Principles common to each of the different contexts described will be identified and examples of specific teaching techniques will be provided. Then, aspects of preparing English teachers to teach learning strategies that need additional research will be discussed.

The role of learner metacognition in strategy learning
Christine Goh (National Institute of Education, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore)
I’ll discuss the importance of learner metacognition for improving their self-regulation, confidence and performance in language learning. A theoretical framework for metacognition is suggested for planning metacognitive development and strategy instruction activities, with examples drawn from L2 speaking and listening. Challenges and areas of further inquiry by teachers and language researchers are also highlighted.

Teaching grammar learning strategies: from principles to classroom practice
Mirosław Pawlak (Adam Mickiewicz University, Kalisz, Poland)
The strategies that learners fall back upon when learning and using English grammar have been neglected in theory, research and classroom practice. This presentation aims to fill this gap by spelling out the principles of grammar learning strategy instruction and providing examples of specific practices that can be used for this purpose in teaching university students and secondary school learners.

Making learning strategies fun with a free web-based multimedia course
Jill Robbins (Strategic Learning Unlimited)
More and more, students are going online to improve their language skills. Yet many distance language learning programs lack effective language learning strategies instruction. This presentation shows how a free online course provides both classroom teachers and autonomous learners with engaging, interactive multimedia communicative language and strategies instruction through humorous short videos, quizzes and downloadable media.

Symposium continued

The relationship of metacognitive awareness of reading strategies to achievement
Bırsen Tütün & Carol Griffiths (İstanbul Kultur University)

Since metacognition has long been recognised as important in language learning, I will present the findings of a study which used a 30-item inventory called the MARSİ to investigate metacognitive awareness of reading strategies among students studying in a university preparation school in Turkey. Implications for the teaching and learning of a target language will be suggested.

Not again? A new revised edition of Practical English Usage

Michael Swan (Freelance)

I will recapitulate the principles behind the best-selling Practical English Usage (OUP) and explain why a fourth edition is needed. I will describe the many updates and additions and show how the material has been restructured, so that the book constitutes not only a usage guide, but also a complete learners’ grammar. Finally, I will introduce the online edition.
INTERACTIVE LANGUAGE FAIR

The ILF is a 1 hour 45 minute event of many presentations. After a brief introduction by the two facilitators outlining the presentations, delegates will then explore their interests with the presenters. The presenters will have individual tables and participants can join them to discuss their presentation in more detail. The presenters will use posters, handouts and a range of materials. This is a feast of presentations in a single interactive format.

The presenters in the Interactive Language Fair are:

Web2.0 Implementation In Saudi women's higher education: findings and recommendations
Kholoud Al Khader (University of Manchester, UK)
Web2.0 technologies have been widely used in educational contexts around the world. However, their use in a Saudi EFL educational context is at an early phase. This presentation will focus on the findings and recommendations on the implementation of these technologies in a particular under-resourced context and the importance of taking into account its socio-cultural domain.

ESOL, TD

Creating reflective practitioners within the lesson study process
Shajkha Al Shabibi (University of Stirling)
This presentation focuses on how three teachers adopted a lesson study approach as a new experience in Oman to improve their reflection skills. The study explores how lesson study creates opportunities for teachers to engage in activities to foster teachers’ higher levels of reflective thinking. The research used classroom observations, recordings of post-lesson discussions and teachers' interviews to collect data.

MD, RES

EFL learners’ evaluation of authentic materials
Bahar Avsar (Eastern Mediterranean University)
Nowadays, many language teachers prefer to use authentic materials, which are not designed to teach foreign languages, to make their lessons more attractive. Would students prefer the same? I will share the results of a research study about the use of authentic materials from the students’ perspective who are at lower and higher English levels.

| TD, TTeD | Elephant.tips: from diagnostic tool to tailor-made teacher aid | Natalla Belousova (Study and Training Centre CLASS, Russia) & Evgeny Bakan (Higher School of Economics)
The presentation will focus on the ELephant.tips project implemented in Russia and aimed at developing a sustainable professional development framework for teachers of English. This national online competition, which evaluated local teaching via video lessons, helped target the challenges in education across the country. The project provided access to needs-driven, as opposed to standardized, quality training and harnessed teachers’ motivation. |

Diane Brown (Sapporo University)
Japanese universities are facing stiff competition for enrollment due to a declining population. Sapporo University is pursuing a policy of active learning to remain competitive. This presentation describes my active learning plan for their Global Action Program (GAP). I expected GAP to encourage and support students’ active learning, however, Japanese communication styles inhibited and challenged their active participation. |
| ESOL, TD | Empowered EFL teachers become reflective mentors - voices from the field
Niki Christodoulou (University of Nicosia)
EFL teachers are often regarded as ‘second-class citizens’ whose voices largely go unacknowledged and under-represented. In this presentation, based on research findings from my doctoral study, I capture ‘teacher voices from the field’ which indicate that when EFL teachers feel appreciated, they can act as pioneers of the reflective practice process to peers. |
| LIT, RES | Cultures of learning in the ELT classroom in Russia
Olga Dolganova (University of Manchester, UK)
I will present a study which explores the development of cultures of learning in a Russian university and how they shape the way English is taught there. I will share how teachers speak about their culture of learning and how their narratives relate to what they do in the ELT classroom in the Russian higher education context. |

| LA, RES | Evolving English learning motivation of Chinese students in Hong Kong
Xujia Du (The Chinese University of Hong Kong)
Drawing on the L2 self system of motivation, a study explored the evolution of the English learning motivation of a small group of Mainland Chinese undergraduates during their intercultural transition at a Hong Kong university. Implications will be discussed regarding the kinds of intercultural and motivational support needed by learners who move from EFL contexts to EMI or study-abroad contexts. |
| LT     | Planning electronic units by students of education
Amal Farhat (Lebanese International University)
This presentation will demonstrate an instructional unit Education students design as a final project for the course Educational Technology. Students include all they have learned throughout the semester and in other courses of education in a template, which includes an overview of the project, process, evaluation material and a conclusion. The unit can be tailored to any subject or grade. |
| TD, TTEd | Transforming Nepalese EFL teaching learning practices through activity-based instruction
Dhundi Raj Giri (Center for Activity-Based Instruction, Nepal)
In this presentation, I shall introduce activity-based instruction (ABI) as the backdrop of the traditional Nepalese EFL classroom. I shall highlight how activity-based instruction has helped teachers transform their teaching learning practices from textbook-limited, rote learning and teacher-centered to student-centered, experiential learning, thereby helping learners become critical, creative and constructivist learners. |
| ESOL   | Bridging inequalities: building English language competencies of first-time tribal learners
Viswanath Kannepalli (National Institute of Technology, Rourkela, India)
A government scheme providing English medium education to rural tribal children in India is observed to be not addressing the requisite needs. Beneficiaries are deprived of expected benefits as these first-time learners have to compete with urban children who have already studied English for three years. A bridge-course in English aimed at preventing tribal student dropout is proposed. |

An investigation of the connection between spelling knowledge and reading
Alcha Rochdi & Fatma Abdelati Elshafe Mohamed (Zayed University, UAE)
Emirati students studying EAP seem to face difficulties in spelling and reading. The literature draws a link between these two skills. This presentation reports on a research study that aims at categorising the type of spelling errors made by EAP Emirati students, investigating the correlation between their spelling knowledge and reading skills, and implementing an intervention to promote spelling ability.

Refugees, relevance and revenue: EFL in an age of change
Thomas Jones (telc – language tests)
Our industry is growing: global English... or a global language. The largest population movement since 1945, cultural/national borders reassessed as identity walls are built or come down. Added to a huge flow of private equity into language education... so how can educational professionals align their own moral compass in these turbulent times? Greg Archer (CATS College Cambridge)
Transitioning into teaching IELTS can be awkward. In this session, I offer guidance on how academic managers can provide teachers with the tools to approach this move with confidence – whether those teachers are unwilling, under-experienced, or even eager to do so – and how teachers themselves can do so seamlessly and knowledgeably. Includes examples of good practice from Mindset for IELTS.

Will it blend? Does blended learning work? How and why?
Efthychis Kantarakis (National Geographic Learning)

More and more voices share stories about the use of blended learning. But what is it? Does the future of education lie in using a lot of media in the classroom? Do the students show the way? Can the teachers follow? Is it just another trend? Let’s review some elements of blended learning and appreciate it for what it is.

Communicative language learning and technology: pedagogy and insights
Evelina Galaczi & Nahal Khabazbashi (Cambridge English Language Assessment)

Have you ever used digital technology to learn, teach or assess language? If ‘yes’, then you’re one of millions of teachers and learners who face the latest frontier in education – technology. In this workshop, we’ll explore the impact of technology on communicative language learning and will provide teacher resources developed by Cambridge English for evolving digital competencies and evaluating digital learning products.

The disappearing teacher
Emi Slater (Bell London)

We have to stand up in front of people every day and yet we are not required to ‘perform’. What state are we actually in when we teach? How much of ‘me’ (the teacher) is needed for our learners to learn? This practical workshop draws on mindfulness and clowning techniques to explore how best to respond to our students.

Assessing children through games: what every teacher needs to know
Christina Giannikas (Cyprus University of Technology)

In this highly interactive workshop, the aim is to present participants with authentic material and hands-on techniques for using games to assess young learners aged 7-11, and how to apply student-centred approaches to assessment. Participants will be presented with more child-friendly YL assessment techniques, compared to standardised assessment, bringing about the endless benefits of games to the young learner.

Teaching pronunciation: choosing an approach
Piers Messum (Pronunciation Science Ltd)

‘Listen and repeat’ and other ‘listen first’ approaches are the best known ways of teaching speech sound pronunciation but they give poor results. Using perceptual exercises from speech science and elsewhere, we will explore whether listening is actually a good starting point for pronunciation. We will then explore the alternative way of teaching sounds, using Japanese as a target language.
Looking into 'the marrow'; researching school ethos and culture
Deniz Kurtoglu Eken (Sabanci University, Turkey)
Ethos is like 'the marrow' of a school; it is a dynamic concept emerging from everyday relationships and interactions and from the material and social aspects of the environment. With reference to a recent research study at Sabanci University, we will discuss how ethos and culture can be creatively explored through the use of a formal survey.

Teacher development: mindset or technology, where is the growth?
Anna Hasper (TeacherTrain) & Emma Louise Pratt (ELTcampus)
This interactive session will provide an insight into socio-cultural and socio-emotional factors that affect our attitude to teacher development. The session will examine different cultures of teacher development and consider the impact that mindset and technology have on teacher development. Teachers will explore their own beliefs and communities of practice and practical ideas for teacher development will be provided.

Make way for the Millennials: preparing Gen-Y for the workplace
Andy Johnson (The London School of English)
By 2020, Millennials will make up 50% of the global workforce (75% by 2025). Tech-savvy, with a desire to access on-demand learning and a requirement for constant feedback and coaching, Millennials give their managers much to consider when attempting to deliver the expected career progression. This workshop will look at how we as educators should prepare this group for work.

Lose those words; how to write shorter, more effective, texts
Edward de Chazal (EM de Chazal Consulting Limited, UK)
Achieving a specified wordcount is a vital skill in various educational and business contexts. Yet many students, teachers and professionals find it challenging to write word-limited texts like abstracts and personal statements. This workshop covers seven techniques to reduce wordcount - grammatical, lexical and critical. Our resulting texts illustrate how using fewer words can enhance the text's clarity, structure and logic.

Leaving home - teaching cultural empathy through drama
Alcja Galazka (University of Silesia, Poland)
In this practical drama workshop, participants will experience how to teach culture issues through drama and explore the key issues around cultural empathy using content and form. Drama has the power to engage students’ affective and cognitive domains in learning about such issues as migration. Participants will experience the immense personal challenges linked to migration, tolerance and inclusion.

50 years of women in EFL textbooks

Benedetta Magoga (University of Warwick, UK)

How has the representation of women in EFL textbooks changed in the past fifty years? In this session, I will present my recent research on changes in the representation of women and men, with a view to considering where we are now and what we need to consider in future materials.

A beginner's guide to creating vocabulary lists with corpus software
Michael Jones (Saudi Aramco)

Using a practical example, this teacher-focused talk aims to demystify the use of corpus linguistics to make effective vocabulary choices. Attendees will be shown how easy it is, even for neophytes, to use the free AntConc corpus analysis software to compile context-specific custom corpora and keyword lists. Those teaching ESP or business English will find the talk particularly useful.

Student-built corpora: do students see the benefit?
Catherine Prewett-Schrempf & Matthew Urmston (Vienna University of Applied Sciences for Management & Communication)

How are corpora language activities perceived by students? I will present an action research project aimed at examining student response to using corpora for a writing assignment. The context is a first-semester Business English course at the Vienna University of Applied Sciences, where students draw on both a learner corpus and an expert corpus to self-correct their work.

IATEFL Testing, Evaluation & Assessment Special Interest Group Open Forum
Helping teachers to aspire to excellence in language testing

The TEASIG Open Forum is an opportunity for members and prospective members to meet the TEASIG committee. Judith Mader and Neil Bullock, joint TEASIG Coordinators, and TEASIG committee members will report on the TEASIG’s activities in 2016 and discuss TEASIG activities, events and future plans with delegates. Anyone can attend, find out more, make suggestions and meet others over drinks and nibbles.

Guilty as charged? Testing in the dock
Felicity O’Dell & Russell Whitehead (LT 123)

We explore divergent views of assessment - an evil that corrupts education or an essential tool for coherent societies? We interrogate assessment from different angles (exams and motivation, exams as diagnostic instruments, proof of competence, means of comparing people) and perspectives (teachers, candidates, parents and employers). Participants discuss and vote on aspects of assessment and we share our Testing Manifesto.

Dialogue in the classroom
Svetlana Zhavoronkova (Moscow Pedagogical State University)

I would like to share my experience of developing and adapting materials for a conversational club. I will demonstrate the principles of dialogue construction in the proximal social situation of group interaction and the role of instructional materials to help the student verbalise their thoughts in alignment with the target language norms.
Social spaces for language learning

Cem Balciğanlı (Gazlı University)

Learning happens everywhere including university campuses and city centres. I explore an English Café in Ankara, Turkey, through the data informed by work on the semiotics of place in the literature on human geography and mediated discourse analysis. Finally, I make recommendations for language teachers as to how to organize such out-of-class activities in EFL settings.

Homework: some practical issues

Penny Ur (Oranılm Academy College of Education, Israel)

Homework assignments make a substantial contribution to the learning of English as an additional language in formal courses, yet it is rarely discussed in conferences. In this session, we’ll look at some practical ideas that improve motivation to do homework assignments and help students get the most learning benefit out of them.

IATEFL Young Learners & Teenagers Special Interest Group Open Forum

Linking, developing and supporting early years, primary and secondary professionals

We’re looking forward to meeting both members and non-members at our Open Forum. You’ll find out about highlights from the SIG’s past year as well as our future plans. We’ll also have an engaging ‘balloon debate’ on applying Finnish approaches to education in YL ELT. We’ll end the SIG Day with networking accompanied by bubbles and nibbles.

English medium instruction in Nepal: a case of the Everest region

Jeevan Karki (Tribhuwan University, Nepal)

This talk is based on a small-scale study on the practice of English as a Medium of Instruction (EMI) in community schools in the Mt. Everest region of Nepal. It will explore why the schools have chosen EMI, how they have been implementing this change, and what risks and scopes it involves.

Impacts of foreign universities on local students’ identity and self-esteem

Mandana Arfa Kaboodvand (Westminster International University, Tashkent)

Although foreign universities that use English as their medium of instruction in non-English speaking countries are increasing, little systematic information is available about how they impact the identity and self-esteem of the local students. This presentation examines this impact, focusing on the role of the English language, and revisiting the concept of acculturation in these contexts.

This presentation reports a qualitative study examining the relationships between pre-service English teachers’ perceptions of positive classroom environment and their psychological and social well-being. The study highlights the importance of teachers’ social and emotional competence and well-being in the development and maintenance of supportive teacher–student relationships and effective classroom management. |

To debate or not to debate In an EAP setting
Mehvar Türkkan (Boğaziçi University)
I’ll focus on debates, which are task types many teachers use to develop students’ communication and persuasion skills. However, they may also lead to uncertainties and questions regarding their practicality as proper teaching tools. Although many teachers question debates in this respect, they can actually prove beneficial, especially in EAP contexts, where students are responsible for their own learning.
Public speaking In the era of global English
Elena Matveeva (Dmitry Nikitin School)
In the business environment, it’s always been important to know how to get the message across to the audience. In the era of Global English, there are specific features of both the language itself and the manner of public speaking which should be taken into consideration to achieve the goal in question. We’ll look at guidelines to follow and an action plan.
Oral presentations In university EFL classes; use and abuse
Ian Michael Robinson (University of Calabria, Italy)
This presentation reports on an experience of Italian undergraduates giving oral presentations in class. It shows how the students are prepared to use, not abuse, oral presentations and reports on students’ perceptions of this, as gathered through their replies to a questionnaire. I hope to show the benefits of using oral presentations in university classes. |

Reflective practice: concrete and meaningful
Lesley Painter-Farrell (New School University)
I will look at reflective practice as an invaluable resource for teachers. For it to be truly productive and meaningful, it must offer practical solutions to classroom problems and be an integral component of teachers' schedules. Using evidence from lessons, such as recordings of lessons or lessons plans, allows teachers to reflect concretely and constructively, whilst fostering teacher development.

Sarah Mercer is currently Professor of Foreign Language Teaching at the University of Graz, Austria, where she is Head of ELT Research and Methodology and Deputy Head of the Centre for Teaching and Learning in Arts and Humanities. Her research interests include all aspects of the psychology surrounding the foreign language learning and teaching experience, focusing in particular on issues of self and identity. She is the author, co-author and co-editor of several books in this area including, Towards an Understanding of Language Learner Self-Concept, Psychology for Language Learning, Multiple Perspectives on the Self in SLA, New Directions in Language Learning Psychology, Positive Psychology in SLA, Exploring Psychology for Language Teachers (Winner of the Ben Warren Prize), and Teacher Psychology in SLA. Her current research focuses on the professional well-being of language teachers in a diverse range of contexts.

Connecting minds: language learner and teacher psychologies

Language learning is a deeply social and emotional undertaking for both teachers and learners. In this talk, I wish to reflect on the fundamental role played by psychology in the learning and teaching of foreign languages. Far from being an optional extra in the teaching and learning debate, we will see just how crucial an understanding of psychology is, given that people and their relationships lie at the heart of the teaching/learning interaction. While teaching materials and specific methodologies remain vitally important, it is impossible to reap the full benefits offered by such resources without those involved being psychologically in a facilitative frame of mind. Together we will consider some of the foundations of a healthy psychology in the language classroom for both teachers and learners. We will assume a socially situated understanding of psychology that challenges the division between cognition and emotion as well as the emphasis on the individual in isolation. We will focus on the centrality of social relationships, especially the connection between teachers and learners, and the role of perception in engagement with contextual opportunities. We will cover diverse aspects of psychology such as beliefs, emotions, sense of self, agency and engagement. Specifically, we will consider how we can help learners to connect mentally and emotionally to their language learning and how we can support teachers to ensure a positive level of professional well-being in their jobs. In sum, this talk aims to focus our minds on what matters most in language education: The people.

Teaching and research; what has neuroscience ever done for us?

Carol Lethaby (The New School / UC Berkeley Extension) & Patricia Harris (Freelance)

The presenters critique the argument that research is irrelevant to teaching, focusing on the field of neuroscience. Rules, regularity and irregularity: contribution to language learning or use?

Anthony Brton (Retired)

I’ll discuss the issue of what the possible role of rules and ir/regularity in language learning and use is. Are there really rules in language, since there are many irregularities? These so-called rules are often quite different, with considerable disagreement about their validity. Even if there’s some partial predictive value, what is the relevance for language learning, teaching and real-time language use?

Grammar rules, OK?

Bruno Leys (VIVES University College, Bruges, Belgium)

Research suggests that language learning is, primarily, a lexical phenomenon. Consequently, a focus on learning, storing and connecting lexical items should be central in ELT. Grammar rules, however, often still dictate what happens in the English language classroom. In this talk, I will show how language topics, traditionally treated in a rule-based way, could benefit from a lexical perspective.

21st Century language education: a step beyond ICT
Mohammad Mehdi Etedalji (Kuwait University)

The ICT integration (including its penetration levels) in language teaching programs has long been viewed as one of the challenges teachers face. However, there seem to exist yet other challenges to be met. This presentation addresses some of these challenges that language teachers face in order to prepare learners to thrive linguistically, as well as academically, in the 21st Century.

Web resources: a weapon to Integrate language skills In classrooms
Mandira Adhikari (Nepal English Language Teachers' Association)

Integrating language skills in a language classroom is essential to acquire proficiency over language learning and critical thinking. This presentation will highlight how English teaching resources found in www.teachingenglish.org.uk and www.americanenglish.state.gov have been instrumental to integrated language skills (listening, speaking, reading, writing, critical thinking etc.) in our Access classroom, a program sponsored by the US State Department.

Investigating candidates’ interactional skills in Trinity College London’s GESE
Lucy Passmore (King's College London)

Interactional Competence (IC) forms an important aspect of oral proficiency as it facilitates real-life L2 communication. I’ll focus on a study that used conversation analysis to identify opportunities for candidates to demonstrate IC in Trinity College London’s Graded Examinations in Spoken English (GESE). It found that such opportunities were evident across three exam tasks and that the GESE taps several aspects of IC.

To mediate or not to mediate = speaking skills in ESP
Barbora Chovancova (Masaryk University Brno, Czech Republic)

Despite its relevance, mediation is a skill not yet thoroughly examined in ESP. Professionals, such as doctors or lawyers, are often asked to study a source text and choose relevant information on the basis of which their clients can take action. How can they be trained to do this in English? This talk will provide an answer to this question.

I love learning English
Birgul Gulener (Bilkent University School of English Language)

There are many cognitive and affective reasons that impact on the students’ level of motivation within an 8-week course of language instruction. This presentation focuses on the research I carried out to identify motivational factors that influence students’ language learning in our Preparatory Programme. The issue is addressed referring to data collected from the online questionnaire and interviews with students.
Can we motivate our students?
Sergio Monteiro da Silva (CNA - Headquarters)
Teachers are often asked by school managers and coordinators to motivate students. The point is, can we actually motivate our students, or anybody for that matter? In this presentation, we'll investigate some of the mechanisms that drive people to get highly involved and willing to act, and think of some practical ways to implement those in class.

Forum on MOOCs

MOOCs by numbers – what can two million learners tell you?
Chris Cavey & Martin Peacock (British Council)
The British Council has run a series of record-breaking MOOCs for teachers and learners, providing a wealth of both quantitative and qualitative data. This presentation will look at what the data can tell us about learners and learner behaviour. What new insights have more than three million comments from almost 200 countries given us into how learners feel?

English in Early Childhood: Language Learning and Development MOOC
Sheona Glanmor (British Council)
Children are learning English younger but do we as English teachers have the right skills? Teaching English to very young children is challenging and full of complexities. This talk gives an insight into the key messages in the British Council’s Future Learn MOOC for 2-6 year-olds. Teachers will know what’s important when planning for this very young age group.

MOOCs for teacher development: design, Implementation and lessons learned
Rustom Mody (British Council, India)
The British Council and the Institute of Education, UCL, have co-created a MOOC aimed at helping Indian teachers increase their awareness of available CPD opportunities. This presentation describes how the MOOC was designed, run and evaluated, and lessons learned. It outlines strategies for supporting first-time MOOCers and discusses how the MOOC was integrated into a wider CPD offering.

Managing student confidence and expectations in mixed level IELTS classes
Clare Walsh & Lindsay Warwick (Pearson ELT)
This talk will explore how differentiated learning in IELTS classes can help to build learner confidence and manage student expectations. We’ll examine how to address differentiated goals in a busy classroom, suggest ways to introduce informed self-reflection and discuss techniques for dealing with input levels higher than a student’s language level. We’ll draw on examples from Pearson’s Expert IELTS series.

Accent can be a problem in English teaching. Which accent do we take as a model? Must it be a native-speaker accent? Must it be a prestige accent? In this session, we will look at how accents vary, both across the UK and in the wider world, and examine some of the implications for English language teaching.

Headsets measuring brainwaves of language learners: new exercises and insights

Susanne Mary Elisabeth Sullivan (Adult ESOL Department, Papanui High, Christchurch, New Zealand)

Brainwaves of language learners can be measured by accessible affordable headsets. Interpreting this data of language learning from the brain’s point of view will lead us to form new conclusions - and new exercises. The presentation includes videos of students using a speechstream exercise to accelerate listening abilities and understanding. A headset demonstration completes the talk with ample time for discussion.

Self-access and autonomous learning: deconstructing and reconstructing two misconstrued concepts

Carol Joy Everhard (Independent)

Over time, a number of myths and misconceptualizations have arisen concerning what constitutes autonomous and self-access language learning. I will first deconstruct and lay bare these two core concepts and then proceed, using examples from theory and practice, to reconstruct them. The importance of both developing inner (internal) resources and exploiting outer (external) resources will be highlighted.

Forum on Gamification and game-based learning

Gamification and game-based learning in English language teaching
Peter Davidson (Zayed University)

The use of digital games has recently proved to be popular with many teachers. In this presentation, we discuss the extent to which gamification and game-based learning can be utilised in ELT, and we show some examples of how they can be successfully incorporated into the English language classroom to improve students’ learning.

How gamification helps to adapt a coursebook for millennial teens
Elena Peresada (StudyCraft)

You don’t know how to motivate your teenage students? They never do their homework and think English coursebooks are boring. But they like playing computer games! In my presentation, I’ll explain what computer games can teach us and I’ll give a few simple examples of how you can gamify your coursebook using a game-design approach.

Games used in engaging virtual environments for real-time language education
Helke Piëp (let’s talk online sprl) & Letizia Cînganotto (INDIRE)

Applying language games in virtual worlds has been the objective of a number of workshops and teacher training initiatives. The amazing creativity by language educators from all over the world, who learned to build, script and design communication activities and games, will be showcased in this joint presentation by INDIRE and let’s talk online.

Making time for change management
Shirley Norton (The London School of English)
Implementing change doesn’t have to be exhausting and frustrating, so why is it often a nightmare? This talk will look at case studies of successful change in our school and some disastrous experiences that are still causing problems years later! We’ll look at the common factors of the successful changes and what was missing from the less successful attempts.

Brain traps for creative teaching centre managers
Natalia Bagdavadze (British Council, Georgia)
The talk aims at highlighting the issues that block the creative potential of teaching centre management and their teams, while investigating new ways of developing teaching centre products. It will also examine and test the different tools and practical activities that help the teaching centre teams be innovative, which is key to the successful operation of any business.

Creative use of language through humour
Geoff Tranter (Technical University of Dortmund)
Humour is not easy, given the potential for intercultural misunderstandings. But humour is also a sign that learners are coming to grips with the new language and can use the language more independently. This talk will look at some examples of activities suitable for a variety of groups and levels to promote the creative use of language in the classroom.

Tatia Gruenbaum (Avans University of Applied Sciences, School of International Studies)
I’ll present the Little English Library (TLEL), a unique not-for-profit English children’s book project founded in 2013. This project runs numerous initiatives to promote children’s literature in Dutch primaries, with the objective of supporting young learners of English and local primary teachers. TLEL was a finalist at both the 2015 School Library Association Inspiration Awards and the 2016 British Council ELTons.

How we can teach prepositions of time promptly yet effectively

Marzena Burzynska (University of Wroclaw, Poland)

Teaching some language rules may become extremely time-consuming because, somehow, they keep escaping from our students’ mind despite all our efforts. One of them is the use of prepositions of time: at, on, in. Inspired by cognitivists’ idea of us perceiving our world as containers, I’ve come up with an idea of teaching time expressions promptly and easily, yet effectively.

Are you a 21st Century teacher?

Maria Heron (NILE)

In this workshop, we will look at the changes that are taking place in our teaching methods, beliefs, resources and learners’ needs and what we need to think about to become 21st Century teachers. We will then try out different activities that relate back to these changes and that focus on engaging our learners while developing our creativity as teachers.

The art of corrective feedback

Emilia Siravo (Zurich, Switzerland)

Teachers get mixed messages as to what kind of corrective feedback (CF) works best. In this workshop, we will review research on recasts and prompts as forms of oral CF in adult ESL classrooms. We will then analyze the pros and cons of different types. Lastly, we will explore effective communicative classroom activities which use a mix of CF techniques.

Knowledge-for-teaching languages: What Is It? How Is It Different?

Donald Freeman (University of Michigan)

The role of teacher knowledge is complex in teaching languages, where ideas about methodologies, grammar and literature predominate. This workshop examines the concept of knowledge-for-teaching, which captures the specific kind of knowledge that teachers use in classrooms. We review the concept in other subjects, investigate how it differs with teaching languages, and explore connections to teacher training, development and assessment.

Raising teaching quality & learner satisfaction in an ELT programme

Ryan Parmee (EC Cambridge)

Are you an ELT programme manager aiming to improve the performance of your programme? Or, are you looking to raise learner satisfaction ratings by developing and implementing a learner-centred strategy over time? In this workshop, I will outline a 5-step strategy taken to raise student-led satisfaction ratings that are a learner-centred approach that also develops teaching practices.

Celebrating diversity with teenagers in EIL classrooms via comedies

Muzeyyen Nazli Gungor & Mustafa Akin Gungor (Gazlı University, Ankara, Turkey)

Comedies may be regarded as supplementary materials in terms of including cultural sense of humour, celebrating diversity, and building bridges between cultures in the 21st Century. In this practical workshop, we aim to demonstrate how comedies representing different cultures and values can be exploited with teenagers in EIL (English as an international language) classrooms.

Corpora and business English: developing learners’ collocational competence
Radwa Younis (Future University in Egypt)
This workshop is going to highlight the potential of using corpora to teach collocation in business English. We will define collocation and shed light on its peculiar aspects that present challenges to learners. The workshop will suggest some corpus-based activities to assist learners in developing a repertoire of business English collocations.

How to give feedback on learners’ pronunciation
Laura Patsko (Cambridge University Press)
There is a lot of good advice available nowadays for how to teach pronunciation. But attention is usually focused on introducing or practising certain features, and many teachers are left wondering: how do I then respond to what my students produce? This workshop features practical tips and techniques which participants could use to give feedback on their own students’ pronunciation.

Working with migrant/refugee pupils in a plurilingual classroom
Sanja Wagner (Erich Kaestner Comprehensive School) & Alla Goeksu (IGS Kronsberg, Hannover & MIGRANETZ, Lower Saxony, Germany)
We will present examples from our classroom practice which show how pupils coming from different cultural and linguistic backgrounds learn English more effectively, if they are given tasks to choose from and if they are allowed to draw upon their cultural knowledge as well as their home languages while working on their task. Thus they grow into self-confident autonomous learners.

Creating learning: helping the students pay attention
Chaz Puglise (Helping Languages)
You can’t chase two rabbits at once... if we start a lesson when our students aren’t ready, we waste our breath. This session is about ways to get the students focused. The exercises offered use psychological and physical ways to eliminate distractions, don’t have a language learning point as such, but work toward getting the students to pay attention.

Be overt not covert!
David Byrne (EC London) & Mark Heffernan (Queen Mary University of London)
This session tackles the question of whether or not we need to be more overt in our teaching methods. We will be presenting our reasons why this should be so and you will be looking at simple techniques you can employ to make your teaching more overt so your students are aware of exactly what they are doing and why.

How understanding humour can improve students’ comprehension
Rosemary Westwell (Ely For Language)
One of the major problems students have with comprehending English is the lack of understanding of the integral humour in the language. This practical workshop explores the nature of humour and common ways in which it can add meaning to written and spoken texts and how an appreciation of humour can enhance students’ language development.

Big picture teaching
Ken Lackman (Ryerson University / Greystone College)
It will be argued that the breaking up of grammatical, lexical and phonological systems across levels into supposedly digestible bits prevents learners from really understanding those systems. Demonstrations will show how these systems can be taught in an hour or two to students at a relatively low level. Following that, a case will be made for a big picture approach.

Demanding high of grammar exercises
Natallja Kailuzina (Streamline Language School)
Grammar is in the core of language learning. However, students’ attitude to grammar usually varies from ‘again, boring grammar’ to ‘can’t understand these English rules’, leading to further frustration and demotivation. The workshop looks at ways that can be used to make grammar more intelligible, memorable and fun for students through 3 Times Practice model introduced by Jim Scrivener.

Blend but not bland: creating a positive blended teaching culture

Ivy Rudd (Macmillan Education)

Whether you’ve already developed blended learning courses or are at the early stages of considering them, a key question to ask is how you’ll support and guide your teachers in the transition to teaching with technology. Using Macmillan English Campus as an example, this session explores step-by-step how to successfully integrate blended learning into your institution’s teaching practices.

Visual culture in ELT

Andrela Zakime (Cultura Inglesa Sao Paulo)

Seeing is a great deal more than believing. Visual culture is not just a part of our everyday life, it is our everyday life. Can we help learners explore the wealth of images that surround us and enhance their language learning outcomes? This talk aims to explore this issue and provide ideas for the use of images in the classroom.

Critical thinking in the Intercultural context: Investigating EFL textbooks

Paweł Sobkowiak (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznan, Poland)

This presentation will try to shed light on the linkage between intercultural and critical thinking skills. I will report on the findings of research aiming to check whether EFL textbooks used in Polish schools contribute to fostering critical thinking skills. The study revealed a small and limited capacity of the textbooks to develop higher-order thinking.

Turning the beast into a beauty: an accreditation journey

Gokce Ünlu & Serkan Aras (Ozyegin University, Istanbul, Turkey)

The process of getting accredited can be perceived as a challenge by institutions. However, it became a fruitful experience for our institution. This presentation will cover our journey of accreditation: how it all started, proceeded and reached the happy ending. It will also provide some practical tips for schools aiming to turn accreditation into a rewarding and developmental process.

Encouraging ESP students to use mind maps

Marla Cyrankowska (University of Rzeszow, Poland)

Mind maps are not new but still not many people know them and actually use them. They are a perfect thinking tool for brainstorming and organising ideas, note-taking and revising the material. They are about engagement, creativity and fun. This talk will show how to use mind maps in ESP courses with examples produced by students.

Language courses today should offer opportunities for immigrants, refugees and international students to build identity-awareness and confidence at expressing themselves in society. I will compare the effects of incorporating identity literacy into ESL and EFL course design in the USA and Japan. Participants will practise innovative identity exploration activities and discuss ways of adapting them in international contexts. |

Forum on Reading

An approach to designing a mobile-assisted reading programme

Wei-Wei Shen (Feng Chia University, Taiwan)

As teaching one single printed coursebook cannot flexibly control individual’s reading processes based on different learners’ topic interests, reading difficulties and vocabulary levels, a design of the software can be helpful to recommend suitable readings for various needs. The presentation will cover the importance of programme design and suggestions for developing autonomous learning to read and increase vocabulary levels.

New perspectives engaging reluctant readers – teaching approaches and individual interests

Helene Demircl (Higher Colleges of Technology)

The talk aims to provide further enlightenment on how to engage learners of all levels and ages in reading, when faced with the differing needs of 21st Century learners and advances in technology. The practical approaches described can be applied in any context and adapted for individual interest. The suggestions will be supported by research.

Combining a whiteboard and mobile devices for reading skills development

Tatiana Kozhevnikova (Moscow Technical University of Communications and Informatics)

Utilizing the advantages of a whiteboard in combination with different mobile devices for reading skills development, I will focus on learning strategies and traditional, digitized and online materials used for the purpose. The results achieved, together with suggestions for further theoretical and practical research arising from experiments performed, will be discussed.

Using adaptive algorithms for efficiencies and accuracy in language assessments

David Booth (Pearson ELT)

Teachers know the importance of making learning fun. They also know that matching the level and interest of material to individual students’ needs is crucial to their learning. This talk shows how adaptive algorithms increase the efficiency and accuracy of language assessments, making them a vital tool for personalising learning.

Can teachers trust automatically-scored speaking and writing tests?
Paul Seddon & Alister Van Moere (Pearson ELT)
Technology is increasingly used for language assessment purposes, but not everyone is convinced that it is as accurate as trained, human examiners. This presentation looks at how automated scoring works and shows how artificial intelligence systems evaluate learners’ speaking and writing skills. It will be of interest to teachers, admissions staff and anyone who is interested in automated scoring.

Discovering ‘Dogme moments’ in T-S communication
Jing Sun (Freelance)
This is a talk about real language use and genuine communication between teachers and L2 students. Based on the ‘Dogme ELT’ theory (Thornbury, 2000) and my personal teaching experience in my two years’ spoken English classes, I present the value of T-S casual conversations in activating learners’ communicative and linguistic needs, facilitating their learning and witnessing them coming into life.

Lecture comprehension difficulties in an English-medium engineering programme: students’ experiences
Holl Ali (Rustaq College of Applied Sciences, Ministry of Higher Education, Oman)
I’ll report on a study that explored engineering students’ experiences with lectures in their English-medium engineering programme. Findings showed that students had difficulties with lectures delivered in English. The results will have implications for EAP and engineering lecturers preparing students to study through the medium of English. I’ll offer practical tips and insights for English as a medium of instruction (EMI) practitioners.
Communication training and collaborative materials development in ESP courses

Tanja Psonder (FH JOANNEUM University of Applied Sciences)

This talk investigates the communication training in English of engineering students and, moreover, aims at illustrating the implementation of the essential communication skills requested for entry level graduate positions. Likewise, it analyses the potential of active student involvement in the field of materials development to respond more accurately to their communicative needs within and outside the engineering community.

Process writing in exam classrooms. Can technology help?

Georgios Chatzis (Karayanni-Chatzis Schools of English, Corinth, Greece)

This presentation gives practical examples of how teachers can use technology to give effective feedback on writing in exam classes, and how students can use it for peer reflection and evaluation. With the help of technology, teachers can also move feedback outside the classroom, thus saving time, while maintaining a balance between a process and a product approach to writing.

Teachers’ beliefs, and students’ expectations, about appropriate feedback practices

Kalyan Chattopadhyay (Bankim Sardar College)

This talk will present teachers’ written feedback practices in the vernacular secondary schools in West Bengal in India, and students’ expectations from such feedback. We will then explore how far teachers’ practices corroborated their beliefs and concepts about appropriate feedback and met students’ expectations. Finally, I will suggest the most appropriate feedback practice in similar contexts to develop learners’ writing.

TRIBUTE SESSION

The tribute session is an opportunity to remember colleagues who have died during the year since the last conference. If you’ve lost a colleague or former colleague, you’ll have an opportunity to say a few words in their memory and, if you wish, to bring along a memento (book, teaching materials, etc.). Or you may just want to come to the session to hear about colleagues who are no longer with us, and perhaps to add any memories you may have.
Global Standards - Local Needs
Global professional development programs aim to deliver a modern, communicative and effective skill set for teaching, regardless of where the teacher is or what the teacher does. In this session, using examples from the world’s largest education market (China), we will discover how the reality of the classroom experience is simply not reflected in international training courses, and more importantly, what exactly we can do about it.

Speakers:
Zhou Cheng Gang (CEO of New Oriental Education and Technology Group)
Jim Scrivener (Author and renowned teacher trainer)
Wang Jun (Director of Teacher Development, New Oriental Education and Technology Group).

Digital myths, realities and practicalities: digitising ELT
Mary Whiteside (Cambridge English Language Assessment)
Does adding technology always add value? Are there really digital natives who can be left to their own (mobile) devices when it comes to technology in education?
Using examples from our MOOC for English Language Teachers, I’ll address some common digital misconceptions and digital realities, with practical ideas on how to integrate technology into teaching and learning.

Using Immersive 360° videos to reduce language anxiety
Sarah Rogerson & Tom Booth (Cambridge English Language Assessment)
Virtual Reality is very much in vogue at the moment but what does this mean for language learning? In this talk, we will explain some of the positive applications of virtual reality, discuss how we have used virtual reality to support Speaking test candidates and describe what we’ve learned from this.

IATEFL Teacher Training & Education Special Interest Group Open Forum
The AGM of the SIG will be followed by a discussion on how to become an effective teacher trainer and educator, with contributions from Donald Freeman, Laxman Gnowali, Sue Leather and Silvana Richardson. The session will end with drinks and nibbles and a chance to meet current committee members and other teacher trainers and educators.

Rhythm matters? Rhythmic training techniques for comprehending connected speech
Ewa Wanat & Rachel Smith (University of Glasgow)
This mixed theoretical/practical session looks at how developing rhythmic awareness can help speech comprehension. We review research into rhythm in cognition and in understanding connected speech. The focus then shifts to practical techniques, developed with a community musician and Micro-Phonics Ltd, to enhance rhythmic attention to speech and build listening skills. A fun and interactive session – we’ll bring the percussion!

IATEFL Pronunciation Special Interest Group Open Forum
Existing members, prospective members and those just curious are welcome to meet the PronSIG committee, find out more about the SIG and discuss future directions. As a follow up to the earlier sessions in the PronSIG day, there will also be a question and answer session dealing with your queries on pronunciation teaching.

Korean folk tales in English: a cooperative project across continents
EunJoo Byun (Daejeon Foreign Language High School)
I’ll report on a project that allowed Korean students to create and send English language storybooks using Korean folk tales to a U.S. school, where the school’s students would then read and send back book reviews to Korea. This project discovered how each country’s traditional tales can perform as a medium of motivation and communication for second language learning.

Gallery project to improve language learners’ key competencies
Hye-jeong KIm (Cheon-an Jell High School)
Imagine the language classroom that looks like an art gallery! In the gallery project, students take part in group work, as well as a gallery tour and presentation. I’ll discuss this project, designed to improve students’ three key competencies: autonomous, language and social competencies. Students try to solve problems in groups, improve language skills and learn how to cooperate with others.

Critical and creative writing through 5Es
Yoojin KIm (Hyeonseo High School)
This presentation discusses how EFL learners can improve their writing skills by following the steps of 5Es: Engage, Explore, Explain, Elaborate and Evaluate. The works of the students will show not only how they develop their communicative competency in written language by peer teaching and learning, but also how they self-evaluate their learning through opinion writing in the end.

How to cheat at English
Paul Dav[es (Self-employed, Oxford)

How infuriating and unfair it is when students prepare thoroughly only to underperform when it matters! This talk gives practical advice on how to ‘cheat’ at English by maximizing your performance in key situations, whether artificial (i.e. exams) or real-world. It covers beating the odds in common exam tasks, disguising gaps in vocabulary, taking grammatical short-cuts and faking fluency.

Motivating students to develop oral skills via interaction on videoconferencing
Ruby Vurdjen (White Rose Language School)

The videoconferencing tool, Zoom, was used to provide students with extra speaking practice online. The students read articles and did contextualised vocabulary exercises on their mobile devices, before debating the issues of these articles online in groups of three. I’ll shed light on how this online interaction increased the students’ motivation to develop their confidence in speaking and enhance their lexical resource.
Forum on ICT

ICT practices within the EFL classroom: exploring various social media
Vanessa De Wilde & Delphine Lajre (Ghent University)
This talk aims to discuss a research assignment introduced on our initial teacher training programme, intended to familiarize future teachers with different social media tools. Teachers should come to view technology and digital tools as natural as the classics within their practice (e.g., literary texts). As such, the assignment aims to normalise the trainee teacher to technology in language teaching.

ICT in ELT: preparedness, practices and hindrances
Dharmananda Joshi (Mahendra Adarsh Vidyashram College)
This presentation aims to focus on strategies used by EFL teachers in the ELT classroom, particularly in higher secondary schools of Nepal. Based on the results of interview and observation, it further emphasizes on preparedness, use and challenges of ICT-based strategies, along with the expectations from ICT and ELT oriented veterans.

Splice it up, digitally
Suzana Anić- Antić (HUPE, Croatia)
This talk is an overview of digital tools that facilitate learning inside and beyond the classroom. I use them to motivate and engage students and simultaneously develop some transversal competences. The tools in question are Skype in the classroom, Quizlet and Edmodo and the key competences they aim to develop are digital competence, collaboration, communication and autonomous learning.

Teaching doctoral students to talk about research to non-specialists
Ann Humphrey-Baker (Language Centre, University of Lausanne, Switzerland)
As well as giving scientific talks within their discipline, PhD students often have to present their research concisely and effectively to a non-specialist academic audience in English. Establishing and maintaining a professional network through face-to-face communication is also essential for career development and cooperative partnerships. This talk will focus on two one-day courses I have developed to fulfil these needs.

Developing ESP students’ language and literacy skills through project learning
Stavroulla Hadjiconstantinou (Cyprus University of Technology)
I’ll discuss a study that is an investigation of the affordances of technology in support of the development of language and critical literacy skills, through project-based learning in an ESP university course for learners in the areas of Communication and the Media. The study targets the promotion of autonomous and critical thinking by engaging learners in the collaborative construction of multimodal digital artefacts.

1900-2130: Evening events

History of IATEFL
1900-2000 In Forth
In 2017, IATEFL is celebrating its 50th birthday. In order to celebrate this momentous event, an evening event will be dedicated to interviews and stories from those who have been in IATEFL over the years. Come along to find out about our association and the personal experiences of others who have been involved.

The C Group annual meeting
1900-2015 In Argyll 1
We will be meeting to report on what has been done since last year in Birmingham, and to discuss possible initiatives for the coming year. Existing C Group members are asked to contribute actively. If you are not a C group member, come anyway and find out more about the group. This could change your life! All are welcome.

Sharing stories
1900-2130 In Argyll 3
After a long day of working sessions, why not relax and simply listen to stories or tell a few yourself IF you feel like it? By stories we mean tales, myths and legends from your own culture or anecdotes from your life experiences. David Heathfield and Andrew Wright will be telling a few stories themselves and a few local storytellers and poets will be joining us to tell their stories. We are sure it will be another lovely evening of story sharing.

‘People forget things but not stories. Into even the simplest story they learn to pour their understanding of each other and of the world around them.’ — Brian Patten

‘I gave peace to the bereft and the forsaken, merriment to the meek. I gave hope to ragged men who had no lord: Will you hear me? For those that will, your hearth will not be lonely.’ — Widsith the Gleeman

David and Andrew are both professional storytellers, both have worked as storytellers in many countries and both have shared their experience by writing books about stories and storytelling. They are very happy to have been associated with this story sharing evening at IATEFL for many years.

How to give a presentation at an International conference (with Jeremy Day)
Giving a presentation can be a stressful experience. This session will give you ways of organising yourself before your presentation and conducting yourself during your presentation to reduce that stress. The aim of the session is to make your presentation a more satisfying experience for you and for your participants.

Plenary session by JJ Wilson

JJ Wilson has taught in Egypt, Lesotho, Colombia, England, Italy, and the United States, and has trained teachers in 30 countries. He is currently the writer-in-residence at Western New Mexico University, where he teaches ESL Methods, Linguistics, Publication, and Creative Writing. He has co-authored, with Antonia Clare, several ELT courses, including Language to Go, Total English, and Speakout, which won the Duke of Edinburgh English Speaking Union prize for the Best Book of 2011 and was shortlisted for an ELTons award. His methodology book, How to Teach Listening, also won an English Speaking Union prize. Research and Resources in Language Teaching: Listening, co-authored with Michael Rost, came out in 2013. JJ also writes fiction, primarily about social justice issues, under the name JJ Amaworo Wilson. He is widely published in the US and the UK, and his novel, Damnificados, came out in January 2016. JJ blogs at blog.reallyenglish.com and jjawilson.wordpress.com.

ELT and social justice: opportunities in a time of chaos

"The job of a citizen is to keep his mouth open." (Günther Grass) Teaching is never neutral. Through our methods, classroom persona, and the materials we use, teachers advocate certain values. These values depend on one’s beliefs – one’s conception of education and the teacher’s role. Some believe that all teachers should use their creativity and passion to bring about social change. They regard their role as pivotal in the development of students-as-critical thinkers who are able to challenge the status quo. Others see themselves as providers of language only. The question for us is: “Should language teachers only teach language?” Or should we include a covert curriculum that gets our students to think critically and speak up about injustice in the world?

In this plenary, I will look at the arguments for including social justice issues in ELT classrooms. I will summarise the literature, referencing major theorists such as John Dewey, Paulo Freire, and bell hooks. I will also examine relevant ideas and movements: critical pedagogy and conscientização; participatory teaching/learning; problem-posing and dialogic methods; “poor man’s pedagogy”; service learning; and “the banking method” versus education as the practice of freedom. Moving from theory to practice, I will then show ways in which teachers can include social justice issues in the classroom. These activities include drama, poetry, images, community projects, and so on. I will conclude with some remarks about professional development and the concept of education for social justice. I will stress that the ideas in this talk are not a methodology or a recipe for becoming a better teacher. They are a “way of being”. Each idea, each activity must be made afresh, re-created every time the teacher steps into the classroom.

Forum on TP feedback

Dare to share! Should trainees share their TP feedback?

Rebecca Brown (York St John University)

In this presentation, I will discuss the results of my survey on TP feedback. Trainees completed a pre-course and end of course questionnaire over five CELTA courses. Questions were centred on feedback preferences; verbal/written, electronic/handwritten, peer/tutor and sharing feedback with peers. I will reflect on the findings and share how this has influenced my practice and that of my colleagues.

Analysing and reframing written feedback

Kateryna Protsenko (International Language Centre)

I will be talking about a simple tool which can help us analyze what we as trainers focus on in written evaluations of lessons observed on pre-service training courses and in-service teacher development. I will also outline several ways to reframe feedback so that it serves the developmental purpose of the trainees to improve their teaching skills.

Getting teachers to act on teaching practice feedback

Tracy Yu (Education First, China)

During teaching practice on certificate courses, trainers often spend more than 100 hours writing and delivering feedback to trainee teachers. Trainee teachers often spend as little as one hour reading all their written feedback over an entire course. Attend this session to discover out how to make written and spoken feedback more valuable to trainees.

Reading Intervention in a foreign language

Aída Montenegro (Alanus University of Arts and Social Sciences)

This talk relates theory and strategies on reading intervention from the Waldorf approach. This approach for reading takes into account word recognition, letter correspondences and connected texts (Suggate et al., 2013b). With the base of this reading intervention in the mother tongue, Waldorf learners learn to read gradually a foreign language in harmony with the other language skills.

Measuring critical reading strategies in an EAP course

Patricia Lorena Bustos Gonzalez (Universidad de Los Andes)

In this talk, I will present some findings of my work in progress related to measuring critical reading strategies in an undergraduate EAP course. I will mainly focus on presenting the critical reading strategies used for the research, plus the items that have been successful and some problems in their design.

Journeys Into the unknown: my first year as a DoS
Shanel Summers (Wimbledon School of English)

Moving from teaching into academic management is not a linear progression. A Director of Studies should have a varied skill set that cannot be acquired in the classroom. However, this doesn’t mean an experienced teacher should not take the plunge. I’ll provide advice on why become a Director of Studies? What are the challenges and how can we rise to these?

Support for managers; better together
Sarah Bryan (EC Manchester)

Whether you’re a new manager, in a new location, or an old-timer, an association of like-minded people in similar positions provides support, guidance and opportunities for sharing ideas. This talk examines how to set up and / or get the most from a local professional network, based on my experience of creating an academic managers’ association in the UK.

How to create your own Interactive EAP content
David Read (English Language Teaching Centre, University of Sheffield)

As English for Academic Purposes becomes ever more personalised and specialised, the need for centres to create their own material grows bigger. This talk will focus on how the English Language Teaching Centre at the University of Sheffield went about the process of building its own bank of personalised materials using specialised e-learning software.

Videos created by students as their assessment
Diana Conheeney & Marla Gulney (Sheffield Hallam University)

We will show how student-created videos can be effectively used as an assessment tool to develop confidence and proficiency in oral and written skills, enhancing personal and professional skills, together with intercultural awareness. We will explain how we incorporated these skills into the task preparation, discuss the challenges faced and how feedback from the students highlighted the benefits.

Extensive reading in translation
Peter Grundy (Durham University)

Reading a text first in English and then in the mother tongue allows learners to confirm their understanding and to compare (their reactions to) the two versions. Working with the English version of a longish short story, we’ll explore generic and text-specific pre-, in- and post-reading activities designed to enrich the language experience and enhance the literary appreciation of students.

Giving feedback to promote learners’ self-efficacy

Susanne Quandt (KGS Hambergen & Landesschulbehoerde, Lower Saxony, Germany) & Annie Quandt (The University of Nottingham)

This talk offers activities which help learners to gain trust in their own language learning abilities, by reflecting on their learning processes and planning their individual learning. There will be examples of student logbooks, presentation portfolios and travel diaries. We will explore examples of multi-modal feedback in computer-assisted language learning (CALL) and relate CALL to the autonomous language classroom.

Teaching everybody through videoconferencing

Mercedes Vlola (4D Content English - ProEdu Educación Inclusiva)

As the United Nations states, we should ensure inclusive and quality education for all. How can we contribute to this goal? And if we are teaching English using videoconference, what can we do? In this talk, I will share ideas and my experience coordinating a team of teachers who are teaching English to state schools throughout the country via videoconference.

Making ELT accessible to blind students through technology and recycling

Rosyclea Dantas Silva (Universidade Federal da Paraíba, Brazil)

This talk aims at sharing some accessible activities designed to teach English language to blind students by using innovative materials, among which I’ll highlight a Brazilian text-to-speech app called Ditango and materials produced through recycling. The activities were conducted at an institute for blind people in the northeast of Brazil and are meant to enhance accessibility and learner autonomy.

Edward Moran (Stirling University)
This presentation reports findings of research into Masters-level students’ use of dissertation writing online support materials. Dissertations were analysed for similarities to examples provided and the input given in online video tutorials. Students were also interviewed on their use of the materials. Findings indicate that students can both adopt and adapt the materials to their needs. |

With an increasing number of academic programmes now being offered as blended and online distance learning, there is a growing need for academic writing courses to be made available online too. In this talk, I present my experiences of, and the lessons learned from, changing a face-to-face EAP writing course into an asynchronous online course. |

Forum on Mentoring

An approach to differentiation in teachers’ development
Beatriz Bologna (Cultura Inglesa - Sao Paulo)
I will present the approach taken to design individual tailor-made mentoring programmes to a heterogeneous group of 13 teachers in my institution, aiming at fostering their desire to invest in self-development and thus enhance our students’ experience. I will share the tool chosen to identify their needs and design their action plans, hoping to help other coaches and mentors.

My teacher-research mentoring experience as a staff developer
Seden Erdemir Tuyan (Cukurova University, YADYO, Turkey)
This presentation is about my action research mentoring experience as a staff developer at YADYO, the School of Foreign Languages at Cukurova University in Turkey. Accordingly, this presentation aims to report some of my reflections on my mentor roles and my learnings throughout this experience, referring to the perspectives of 10 EFL teacher practitioners actively involved in the program.

Mentees’ perspectives of a mentoring program in the Saudi context
Nadla Shukri
Induction and mentoring of novice teachers has gained considerable worldwide attention. However, in the Saudi context there is limited literature. I’ll report on a study that investigated EFL novice teachers’ perspectives towards the mentoring program and its challenges. Quantitative and qualitative data were collected from eight mentees. The research presented preliminary implications for future needs of mentees.

Listening: ways out of the fog
John Field (CRELLA Research Institute)
Two types of information are critical to effective listening instruction. One is a better understanding of the complex skill that we aim to develop. The other is an accurate impression of the signal that learners have to make sense of. This talk illustrates how these factors can produce more targeted teaching and help teachers identify more closely with learners’ difficulties.

Independent vocabulary learning: the teacherless approach
Alda Sahutoglu (St. Giles London Central)

Autonomous vocabulary learning is widely promoted in the TEFL world. However, most learners only initially seem motivated to apply various techniques, and only a few of them permanently adopt new study skills. So, how can more students be pre-‘charged’, like any modern device, to eventually develop enough capacity to go teacherless and learn vocabulary independently?

Forum on Innovation in teacher development: Iranian, Indian and Sri Lankan success stories

Supporting local teachers in their first year at British Council
Conleth Buckley (British Council, Sri Lanka)
A practical and technical talk on the process and challenges of running a year-long, newly-qualified teachers’ in-service training and mentoring program. The Sri Lanka Teacher Advancement Route (STAR) supports local, Sri Lankan teachers in achieving British Council teaching quality standards. This will be of interest to teacher trainers, teaching centre managers, directors of studies and HR managers.

PD and entertainment? Telegram makes it possible!
Saeid Sarabi-Asl (Precise Solutions)
It is blatantly obvious that newly-qualified teachers need further support when they start teaching. In this talk, I will explain how Telegram helped us provide support to our new teachers and encourage professional development. I will also outline why the features of the Telegram application make it an undeniably exceptional tool for professional development.

Developing British Council teachers for success: an Indian narrative
Kalpita Sarkar (British Council, Kolkata, India)
Our teachers are local nationals, relatively inexperienced, and usually recent CELTA graduates. Yet we require them to deliver the highest quality ELT as promised by our brand. This narrative will focus on how we respond to this challenge by training and developing teachers. You will gain some practical ideas in teacher development for your own contexts.

<td>Action research can be a powerful professional development tool. However, there are relatively few accounts of how it can be successfully incorporated into programmes of professional development, especially in the private ELT sector. This session will present my experience of managing an action research initiative and offer some advice for teachers and teacher-managers to be effective in its undertaking.</td>

<td>I report on a study to investigate how using action research helps teachers develop professionally and change their teaching practices. Data, collected from interviews and focus groups, were analyzed through case studies of four teachers involved in EIA Bangladesh for doing research. The study revealed that doing research helped the teachers become confident, identify students’ needs and use new teaching techniques.</td>

Staff appraisal to Impact teacher development and teaching quality
Marcela Cëntra (Cultura Inglesa Sao Paulo)

This talk focuses on the investigation of the impact of staff appraisal on teacher development and quality of teaching, which impact on student retention and satisfaction and the overall ELT scenario. Appraisal and feedback tools that may motivate teachers, promote accountability, team-building and trigger development and teaching quality will be discussed, based on small-scale research projects.

Motivating the troops – keeping hold of your staff
Niall Lloyd (The Anglo Mexican Foundation)

Many motivational theories relate to the workplace, but which are important for today’s manager? What factors are essential for motivation and how can these be assessed on an individual basis? A qualitative writing exercise to assess the motivation of individuals will be presented and discussed. Perhaps you could do this in your workplace; it could be motivational in itself.

Constructing an MEd TESOL to support a diversity of learners
Margaret Allan (University of the West of Scotland)

This session examines the construction and delivery of a new university MEd TESOL programme, specifically developed to meet the unique learning needs and associated goals of a diversity of learners from EU, international and Scottish contexts. It discusses, in addition, the emergent research examining the efficacy of the programme for this group.

Making progress visible
Ian Wood (Pearson ELT)

We all believe that making progress is motivating for learners, but making progress visible and evidencing the efficacy of our teaching isn’t so straightforward. This session looks at what our learners try to achieve and how we can measure progress towards their goals; while questioning how realistic our expectations and promises to the learner really are to begin with.

The ILF is a 1hr 45min event of many presentations. After a brief introduction by the two facilitators outlining the presentations, delegates will then explore their interests with the presenters. The presenters will have individual tables and participants can join them to discuss their presentation in more detail. The presenters will use posters, handouts and a range of materials. This is a feast of presentations in a single interactive format.

The presenters in the Interactive Language Fair are:

Joint projects within EFL contexts: points to ponder
Suhaïr Al-Åalam (Al Ghurair University)
This presentation discusses the impact of using joint versus traditional projects upon EFL university students’ communicative competence. Involving two groups, I implemented an experimental study at a private university in Dubai during the academic year 2015-2016. The research findings prove that there is a slightly significant difference between the two groups’ achievement, in favor of the experimental group.

EAP
Investigation into the academic writing difficulties of Saudi postgraduate students
Noof Al-Harbi (Exeter University, UK)
I’ll report on an interpretive study aimed to investigate the difficulties in English academic writing, as perceived by Saudi postgraduate students and their English supervisors in an English-speaking country. I’ll discuss the reasons that attributed these difficulties and how these difficulties can be solved. Also, how the study adopts a sequential mixed-methods exploratory design for collecting and analysing the data.

Promoting learning and cooperation among Thai EFL students through PBL
Pragasil Sittithikul (Thammasat University)
This presentation features the research I conducted with Muslim and Buddhist students in the south of Thailand to boost their language proficiency, as well as a better understanding and cooperation among these students. I utilized a project-based learning (PBL) approach to find out if the PBL approach contributes to the growth of cooperation and language learning improvement among these students.

Student teacher training through the use of portfolios
Yoshihito Sugita (Meiji Gakuin University)
This presentation aims to examine the effects of an English Teaching Methodology course and the use of training portfolios on the improvement of student teachers’ fundamental teaching skills. The results indicated that, regardless of their proficiency level, the students who had taken the course were perceived to be significantly more skillful at the end of the course than at the beginning.

Elena Vellkaya (Higher School of Economics, Moscow, Russia)
This presentation will look at an academic presentation as a text and analyse its linguistic features. I will examine text organization, coherence, cohesion, informativity, completeness, and modality of students’ presentations. I’ll then focus on the role of these features in expressiveness and pragmatics of the text. Recommendations on how to structure an academic presentation will be given.

Teaching the language of negotiations – challenges and compromises

Symposium on Teacher-research for difficult circumstances

Four years of exploratory action research in Chile, taking stock
Richard Smith (University of Warwick) & Paula Rebolledo (British Council/Mineduc Chile)
Since 2013, the Champion Teachers project has offered an alternative to top-down in-service training for school teachers in Chile. The recommended approach – exploratory action research – was explicitly developed with over-burdened teachers of large classes in mind. We present an evaluation of strengths and weaknesses and ideas for deepening/widening the scheme’s impact.

Teacher Research 2.0
Michelle Evans (University of Warwick) & Asli Gokturk Saglam (Ozyegin University)
We will describe and evaluate an innovative attempt to provide online teacher-research guidance for teachers with limited development opportunities who are working in difficult circumstances (large classes, low-resource classrooms, etc.) The intervention incorporated ideas from the ‘Teacher-research for Difficult Circumstances’ impact initiative (warwick.ac.uk/lta/research/trdc/) into a five-week TESOL EVO session.

Teacher association research in Cameroon: recent developments
Harry Kuchah (University of Bath)
This presentation reports on an ongoing collective and collaborative research project within the Cameroon English language teacher association and shows how this is currently being refined and extended. Through creative reflection around research questions framed by members of the association, teachers are able to improve their practice and assert their identity as informed practitioners.

Children’s voice and choice in Indian English classrooms
Annamarja Piinter (University of Warwick) & Rama Mathew
This talk is based on a British Council funded ELTRP project (2015-16), which focused on teachers and children working together as co-researchers in Indian primary and secondary English classrooms. We will share some data regarding teachers’ reflections about their own development, with particular focus on data related to their local ‘difficult’ circumstances.

Who watches the Watchmen? Assessing the Assessors

telc – language tests has gathered an academic panel to explore the world of assessment from the inside. We will consider various ethoses used by the different exam boards and how these are then drawn together by national and international accreditation bodies and agreements. We will examine the value of exams and to exactly whom they are valuable. We will also consider the different modes an exam board uses for gaining credibility. We will look at internal and external factors which precipitate participation. Also, we will examine cultural bias and how to proactively prevent this in test development. We will look into these issues and discuss and ask the following:

- Modes of assessment
- What is being assessed?
- Who does the assessment?
- Who decides they can?
- Life of an examiner
- Practical skills or linguistic hoops?
- Teaching a language or teaching a test?

This is designed to be interactive and will include a Question and Answer period.

Digital technologies are increasingly present in EFL classrooms the world over. However, not much attention is paid to whether they actually help students learn English more effectively. In this talk, we tackle the myths and review research carried out with English language learners aged 6 to 16. We ask whether technologies can help them learn better – or not.

This talk will show how the marginalized students studying in Nepali Medium (native language) schools of elementary level have enriched their English language proficiency by the blending of English language with native musical flavor. By composing English songs and supplementing the lyrics with English language pattern in Nepali beats and songs, students could grasp more than the traditional method.

Analytical thinking and autonomy are some key skills students need to develop for the 21st Century. This CLIL talk presents the use of one thinking procedure - See-Think-Wonder - as a tool to explore links between geology, architecture, history and literature of County Kent. The interdisciplinary character of the lesson is then displayed in the form of graphic organisers.

The British Council’s new Continuing Professional Development Framework for teacher educators supports the development of teacher educators including trainers, materials developers, leaders, managers and researchers. This talk examines core practices and skills described within the framework and showcases resources available on www.britishcouncil.org/englishagenda to support development. Participants will receive practical suggestions on using the framework at an institutional and individual level.

Readers’ theatre: a call for developing oral skills
Man Maya Sharma (Educational Training Center, Kathmandu)

Readers’ Theater is a new technique to develop oral skills of students in the ESL/EL classroom. It involves two or more readers in presenting any text. The learners adapt the authentic text to gesture and later to their own versions creatively. In this workshop, I will show how this technique can be used effectively in the classroom.

Creating an inclusive classroom; raising awareness of dyslexia and neurodiversity
Anne Margaret Smith (ELT well)

This practical session explores ways of developing a classroom culture that values the (neuro)diversity of its members, in order to enhance group dynamics and learners’ self-esteem. Participants will have the opportunity to try out some activities that raise awareness on an individual, group and institution level and consider their application in their own settings.

Peacha Kucha - in association with Ladybird 1900-2015 in Lomond
Originating from the word “chitchat,” a Japanese term describing the sound of conversation, we again offer you a Pecha Kucha evening. By now you should know the format: each speaker is allowed a slideshow of 20 images, each shown for 20 seconds, giving a total presentation time of six minutes and forty seconds before the next speaker is up, keeping presentations concise and fast-paced. It promises to be as exciting as ever so don’t miss it!

Extensive Reading Foundation Reception and Awards Ceremony 1930-2030 in Forth
JJ Wilson, teacher, teacher trainer, novelist and plenary speaker will present the 2016 Language Learner Literature Awards. Meet publishers and the award-winning authors over drinks. The first 200 attendees will also receive a free copy of one of the winning books.

How to be successful in an ELT Interview (with Caroline Moore)
Congratulations, you’ve been invited to a job interview, so you’ve persuaded your potential employer that you have the essential knowledge, skills and experience for the job. The 3 A’s: Appearance, Attitude, and Awareness of your interviewer will be critical for your success, and are equally important for face-to-face and Skype interviews. We’ll have a look at these, and at the different kinds of questions that you might be asked. You’ll have a chance to practise, including answering questions for both teaching and management roles.

Jane Setter is Professor of Phonetics at the University of Reading, UK, Secretary of the British Association of Academic Phoneticians, and a Senior Fellow of the UK Higher Education Academy, which is a mark of teaching excellence. She has taught in Japan, Hong Kong and Germany as well as the UK, and has published on English pronunciation, aspects of Hong Kong and Singapore English phonology, and intonation among children with speech and language deficits. She is probably best known as co-editor of Daniel Jones’s Cambridge English Pronouncing Dictionary (CUP: 18th edition, 2011), which is celebrating its 100th anniversary in 2017. She is also a regular contributor to University College London’s annual Summer Course in English Phonetics, and – in her spare time – a rock singer. Where angels fear to tread; Intonation in English language teaching

Intonation is one of the earliest acquired aspects of speech; the crymelodies of infants are influenced by the intonation of their mothers, and very small toddlers are able to use intonation to indicate turn-taking patterns in play conversations before they can form words. It plays a vital role in successful communication in English, as it does in other languages. If this is true, why is intonation neglected in English language pronunciation teaching, and how can it be taught effectively? This presentation takes the audience into the seldom-navigated region of intonation in English language teaching, focusing on the role of three main elements: tonality, tonicity and tone. Drawing on material from a number of different sources, we explore the role of intonation in English, and look at which elements are teachable, which are learnable, what resources are available to the teacher and the learner, and how intonation might be approached in the English language classroom and as a self-access learning activity. Expect a multimedia, audience participation experience.

Support in English teaching communities and novice teachers’ teaching approach
Gloria Romero (University of Ottawa)

The experiences of novice teachers during the first years in the teaching profession are crucial to their professional development. Community support allows its members to develop and learn from each other. This presentation will explore the influence of supportive and less-supportive communities on how novice teachers approach teaching English as a foreign language in various school contexts in Chile.

How to cultivate a growth mindset in YL EFL classrooms
Sophie Handy (British Council Paris)

At British Council Paris, we support our students in achieving their learning goals via an Assessment for Learning culture. Carol Dweck’s Growth Mindset is a natural extension of this, developing pupils’ self-awareness of their learning. By studying what our teachers do, I’ve discovered, and will share, how to cultivate this approach despite the culture of summative assessment in the French context.

A localized EFL method for kids with significantly fulfilling results
Mahdi Tabesh Pour (Tabesh Institute of Education)

After years of dissatisfaction with coursebooks by popular ELT publishers, I eventually came up with a customized and localized approach, that I’ll present, which thoroughly reflects and meets the needs of students at my English school, and greatly improves and facilitates effective learning. The students’ progress was closely monitored and compared and parents were surveyed too. The system achieved significant results.

Let’s listen to the learners
Brian Tomlinson (Anaheim University, University of Liverpool)

In this presentation, I will present the case for listening both to what language learners have to say about the materials they would like to use and to what they have to say about themselves, about their ideas, their views and about their world. I will refer to successful examples of listening to learners and suggest other ways of listening.

Language from the real world: authentic video materials
Phillip Warwick (Pearson ELT) & Andy BlustIn (BBC Worldwide)

What is authentic language? Can graded language in coursebooks be authentic? Or is it inevitably artificial? To answer these questions and to show teachers how language in the classroom can be both authentic and accessible, this practical talk showcases Pearson’s new secondary course Wider World, focusing particularly on its wide range of video lessons, including original BBC programmes.
The why of leading: communicating your business culture effectively
Doris Suchet (Regent Oxford)
Thriving communities have a clear vision; they share a common culture. People own their ideas and mistakes more if they feel personally invested in the culture of their organisation. Branding and teaming exercises should, therefore, be at the core of your organisation’s CPD strategy because they help your team understand not just how they are expected to perform, but why.

The impact of task design on students’ motivation and autonomy
Kasim Koruyan (Kingdom of Saudi Arabia)
This workshop is about language tasks I designed to be carried out in stress-free, technology-enhanced language learning environments that promote learner autonomy and intrinsic motivation, encouraging students to speak as themselves, express their own desired identities, including those of the imagination and creativity. Pedagogical recommendations will be provided to the audience.

Writing skills and automated feedback
Edward Briscoe (English Language ITutoring Ltd/Cambridge University)
Recent developments in the free automated assessment and feedback tool Write and Improve, which complements teachers’ work in language learning, exploit advances in computational linguistics and machine learning, delivering performance essentially indistinguishable from a human examiner at script, sentence and sub-sentence levels, whilst displaying information in an intuitive, engaging and easily interpretable way.

Integrating plurilingual practices in ELT in a superdiverse world
Angelica Galante (OISE-University of Toronto)
With globalization and immigration, ELT approaches that recognize and value diversity are needed. Plurilingualism is one approach that offers several benefits to English learners, but practice is still a challenge. In this talk, participants will learn about plurilingual tasks and projects that can be implemented in their own context. Plurilingual ELT represents a world that is diverse and inclusive.

Teamwork: making sense of authentic dramatic scripts
Sarah Simpson (The London School of English)
Contemporary play and film scripts not only expose learners to natural language, they also form a great basis for group problem-solving activities. Understanding what is actually going on in a scene and then really communicating the story and message behind the text requires collaboration and trust. This session aims to give teachers practical suggestions for using theatrical texts.

| Carron 1   | 90 audience | Using e-portfolios to develop pronunciation teaching via an awareness-raising framework
Catarina Pontes (Cultura Inglesa Sao Paulo)
Ever wondered why pronunciation teaching tends to be overlooked in so many English lessons? In this talk, I will share findings on how a group of teachers on a post-graduation pronunciation course developed awareness of their own pronunciation by building an electronic portfolio, and how it impacted the quality of their teaching. |
| Carron 2   | 90 audience | Teaching and assessment: the English language student and university studies
Jonathan Frank (Trinity College, London)
Many students and candidates wish to use English for study and academic purposes, either in-country or abroad. With some reference to Trinity’s Integrated Skills in English (ISE) exam, this talk will consider how well these motivations are met in the following cycle: the teaching and learning context; assessment selection and preparation; institutional admission requirements; and English support once registered. |
| Dochart 1  | 90 audience | Desert Island descriptors: where do our values lie?
Simon Marshall (St John’s University York)
In this talk, I will present the results of a survey regarding trainers’ ‘Desert Island’ choices from the 42 descriptors included in the CELTA 5 Candidate Record Booklet. These choices encapsulate the core values that trainers prioritise when developing and accessing pre-service teachers. The presentation of these results will then lead into discussion of their implications. |

The underlying app technology used allows other institutions to produce their own vocabulary apps to suit the particular needs of their students.

Helping pre-service native UK TESOL teachers with knowledge about grammar
Rhian Webb (University of South Wales)
UK native English speakers do not implicitly know the grammar of their native language. This talk presents the benefits of teaching traditional grammar used in EFL teaching materials explicitly for 40 hours before pre-service TESOL education. The talk outlines a starting point for instruction and gives reasons for why formal explicit grammar instruction needs consideration in UK TESOL education.

Cross-medial encounters with classics: challenging the original text
Max von Blanckenburg (University of Munich)
This talk will explore what can be gained when teaching a literary classic in the EFL classroom does not start with, nor revolve around, the original text – but harnesses a multiplicity of its various medial formats. Based on my research, I will conceptualise central aspects of a learner-centered scenario and exemplify practical implications.

Hit the ground running: managing intensive teacher training camps
Julie Wallis (The London School)
In this talk, I will look at the skills needed to manage a group of trainers and office staff (that you haven’t employed) as well as a demanding bunch of trainees with many different problems. I’ll offer an honest, reflective look at my experience at Pilgrims, the problems I encountered, and the solutions I found.

Analyzing data on lesson plans: opportunities for teacher’s development
Jaqueline Fernandes
It is common sense that pedagogical coordinators observe their teachers’ classes. However, lesson plans are not always considered as a valid step of the class observation process. Therefore, this session is an attempt to analyze how specific data, or lack of it, on lesson plans can make opportunities for coordinators to help their teachers to improve their teaching techniques.

2b or not 2b? That is the CELTA feedback question
Jacqueline Douglas (Bell Cambridge)
I’ve noticed an increasing trend towards using CELTA 5 criteria to reference written feedback. Based on a survey of tutors and trainees, this talk will explore how widespread this practice is, ways in which it is helpful and whether it may be at times unnecessary or unhelpful. Current and future tutors all welcome - come and help shape the debate.
Beyond the coursebook; the successes and limitations of negotiated syllabi

Beatrice Segura Harvey & Sarah Hammond (Brighton Language College)

For short-term EFL students visiting the UK, it can be a frustrating experience starting the book at page 56 on their first day. This presentation attempts to describe an alternative approach to a coursebook-dependent syllabus and reports findings from its first pilot which involved 862 teenage students and 22 teachers over a period of 13 weeks.

Developing self-regulated learning skills through a restructured International foundations program

H. Douglas Sewell (University of Calgary)

Going abroad, many international students struggle to adapt to new educational approaches and expectations. To address this problem, our faculty has incorporated self-regulated learning development activities into our restructured international foundations program. After outlining both key SRL theory points and our revised program, this presentation will consider challenges faced and success achieved integrating such activities into these new undergraduate courses.

The English classroom as a talent show

Marla Estela Ribeiro Jardim Rondon (Freelance)

The aim of this workshop is to use the students’ talents to teach English, bringing the learning process closer to their reality. Their active participation promotes creativity, engagement and self-esteem. Some activities will be demonstrated such as: singing with choreography; making video clips (cookery programme); creating a character drawing and writing (comic strip); making a huge boarding game.

Assessing EAP speaking skills using integrated tasks

Joanna Wrzesińska (ETS - TOEFL)

The session discusses the benefits of using integrated speaking tasks in EAP assessments. Such tasks require students to use their listening, reading and speaking skills within the same task, instead of assessing each skill separately. Following this approach, English proficiency can be measured in an authentic way by simulating real-life settings. Examples will be drawn from the TOEFL iBT® Test.

Elena Kuznetcova (Institute of Dialogue of Cultures INTERLINGUA)

How do you make sense of all the data, information and knowledge that passes by you each day? How do you stay current in your field and ready for career changes? This interactive workshop will show how the concept of Personal Knowledge Management enables professionals to apply a set of core work skills for information processing, knowledge application and decision-making.

Much more than spelling: dictations revisited

Urs Kalberer (Sekundarschule Landquart, Switzerland)

Dictations have often been discredited as pure spelling checks. In this workshop, participants will discover and experience the versatile nature of dictations, based on my own tried and tested activities with elementary to pre-intermediate learners. Independent of the size of class, dictations foster all language skills, are easy to set up, and do not require any technology.

TED talks for teens: an idea worth spreading

Daniel Barber (National Geographic Learning)

Do you see these exciting resources as rather grown-up? But TED pushes tomorrow’s global citizens in the right directions too, encouraging them to look at old topics critically, with a fresh perspective. Come and try out the principles of selecting and adapting appropriate TED talks for teens, and raise your expectations of the authentic materials that teens can cope with.

Long live exam prep!

Lindsey Clark (MA student, UK) & Kyle Dugan (Freelance, Italy)

Many teachers assume that preparing students for EFL exams needs to be a tedious and even fruitless experience in terms of learning. In this workshop, we aim to debunk this myth and explain how a new, fresh approach could be implemented. We will demonstrate some tried and tested learner-centred activities for the speaking sections of the mainstream exams (B1-C2).

The impact of emotion and affect in our learners

Leonor Marin & Susana Gutierrez (Universidad Nacional del Santa)

To what extent does the lack of affect and not letting learners show their emotions influence in achieving their learning? Our teaching? Get ready to experience five activities which helped us to raise our learners’ self-esteem. Integrating emotional expression and genuine affect in classroom life creates a powerful educational tool.

How to assess student writing reliably and speedily with TextInspector.com
Stephen Bax (The Open University, UK)
TextInspector.com is a reliable research-based online tool which analyses and grades students' written work and reading texts from beginner level to university level, benchmarked to the CEFR. This workshop will give you the opportunity to discover and try out the tool step-by-step with your own laptop or tablet. The talk is sponsored by TextInspector.com, the tool's publisher.

Young learners, storytelling and story-making!
Karen Saxby (Cambridge English Language Assessment)
Stories build social and emotional understanding, promote life lessons, and teach language. They engage by inciting emotions: anger, happiness, fear... This workshop explores how we can introduce stories into the young learner classroom - for fun and meaningful language exposure - as springboards to finely-tuned language learning. I will use examples from Storyfun, as Cambridge English: Young Learners (YLE) preparation.

Making business English more motivating with SCARF
Stephan Rinke (telc - language tests)
In this practical hands-on session, we will look at creating motivating learning experiences by understanding the real drivers of human behaviour. Exploring the domains of the research model SCARF (Rock 2008) in short interactive activities will help us develop strategies to address the domains of social experience David Rock puts forward to achieve rewarding and effective Business English learning scenarios.

Working with classroom assistants
Renuka George (British Council, UAE)
Teaching assistants are often underutilised and given the job of worksheet-distributor in most EFL classes. If teaching assistants are to function effectively, then they most definitely need to be trained. This session covers how we can guide our assistants in supporting the learner, the teacher, the learning aims and the wider objectives of the school.

Pathways to success: discovering your creativity and purpose in ELT
Dina Blanco-Ioannou (University of Applied Sciences Northwestern Switzerland, School of Teacher Education)
What professional goal do you want to accomplish? What’s stopping you from discovering and achieving it? As teachers, often consumed by the routine of our profession, we sometimes allow opportunities for growth to pass us by. This workshop shares effective tools and techniques which, when creatively applied, support you towards realising your professional and/or personal goals.

<td>Plenary session by Imtiaz Dharker</td>
<td>Clyde Auditorium</td>
<td>Imtiaz Dharker is a poet, artist and documentary film-maker. Awarded the Queen’s Gold Medal for Poetry in 2014, recipient of the Cholmondley Award and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature, her collections include Purdah (Oxford University Press), Postcards from god, I speak for the devil and The terrorist at my table (all published by Penguin India and Bloodaxe Books UK), Leaving Fingerprints and Over the Moon (Bloodaxe Books UK). Her poems are on the British GCSE and A-Level English syllabus, and she reads with other poets at Poetry Live! events all over the country to more than 25,000 students a year. She has been Poet in Residence at Cambridge University Library, for Thresholds, and has recently completed a series of poems based on the Archives of St Paul’s Cathedral. She has had ten solo exhibitions of drawings in India, London, New York and Hong Kong. She scripts and directs films, many of them for non-government organisations in India, working in the area of shelter, education and health for women and children. Over the moon Imtiaz Dharker will read from her new Glasgow poems as well as Over the Moon. These are poems about music and feet, church bells, beds, café tables, bad language and sudden silence. In contrast with her previous work written amidst the hubbub of India, these new poems are mostly set in Britain, where she has built a new life with – and since the death of – her husband Simon Powell. ’This is a passionate, uplifting collection of poems about language, love and loss, grief and joy, elegy and celebration. The loss of a great love makes poems of piercing beauty. In her finest book to date, Imtiaz Dharker finds resolution in language itself, and in a world the more loved for the sharpness of loss.’ Gillian Clarke ‘Imtiaz Dharker’s new collection is the crown to a celebratory, humane, wholly utterable, subtly crafted poetry. Reading her, one feels that were there to be a World Laureate, Imtiaz Dharker would be the only candidate.’ Carol Ann Duffy</td>

At Collins ELT we believe it’s essential that learners have access to real and up-to-date examples of English. That’s why we are committed to creating materials that are authentic, high-quality and easy to use.

The mission to produce authentic materials has been at the heart of our ELT publishing since 1987 – when the first Collins COBUILD dictionary was published.

“How can I get my students excited about learning English?”

Are you looking for fresh ways to teach English? Our award winning software, Sonocent Audio Notetaker, can help.

The software visualises recorded speech as coloured chunks, which you and your students can highlight with a click. Plus you can add images, slides and text notes to the same workspace to create a super study resource.

It’s fun, it’s interactive and it’s tailor made for teaching speaking and listening skills.

See what the software can do at www.sonocent.com

The IATEFL Jobs Fair offers recruiters and jobseekers a one-stop shop by bringing top organisations and English language teaching professionals together.

Join us:
- Browse the posts on our Jobs Boards
- Speak informally with employers about a career or location move
- Apply for specific jobs on site
- Interview with prospective employers
- Join the CV Clinic
- Visit the ELT Exhibition

The administrative procedures of applicants and employers were expertly managed. Following the conference I was pleased to receive offers from several potential employers. I have now accepted a post and am looking forward to the next stage in my career.

Candidate, Harrogate

The Jobs Fair gave me new insights, and it was a great opportunity to network…I now feel better prepared for the future.
